STORMS CLAIM 122 IN JAPAN

TOKYO (AP) — At least 122 persons were killed and 22 are reported missing in blizzards and storms that swept parts of Japan during the weekend holiday celebrating the arrival of spring.

Twenty-three mountain climbers died on Mount Fuji, Japan's highest peak, where heavy rain and winds up to 90 miles an hour set off an avalanche. Six other climbers are missing. It was the worst mountain climbing disaster on the 12,337-foot mountain since the Second World War.

The National Police Agency reported 85 deaths in traffic accidents Sunday and Monday morning.

Police said 12 fishermen were drowned and nine others were presumed dead following the sinking of their fishing boat off the Danjo Islands west of Kyushu, the southernmost main Japanese island. Authorities said three other persons were listed as missing and presumed dead after their yacht was washed ashore 24 miles southwest of Tokyo.

In other areas, police said, two climbers were killed in the central Alps in Honshu, Japan's main island, and four were reported missing on 7,513-foot Mount Daisetsu, in central Hokkaido, the northernmost main island.

Nixon Declares All-Out War On Drug Abuse

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon Monday called drug abuse his country's "No 1 domestic problem" and said that despite the need to save money "this is one area where we cannot have budget cuts."

Penalties for marijuana use should be uniform throughout the country, he said.

The president is scheduled to receive a report on marijuana Wednesday from the national commission on marijuana and dangerous drugs.

This morning the president met Prime Minister Nihat Erkin of Turkey and thanked him for Turkey's campaign against poppy cultivation. Later today, he will sign a bill establishing the special action office for drug abuse prevention, which Nixon established last year under Dr. Jerome Jaffe.

POLICY CRITICIZED

He made his comments in New York City, where he met federal and state officials in the morning. He returned to Washington in the early afternoon to meet with his cabinet committee on international narcotics control.

On the meeting table were bags of seized heroin valued at $2 million. The small bags, weighing a total of about 20 pounds, came from France and were seized last year in Port Elizabeth, N.J.

In addition to his criticism of the heroin trafficker, the president said he had not changed his opposition to the legalization of marijuana, but he said some penalties may be too stiff.

Parties come to the cabinet committee, Secretary of State William P. Rogers reported that Turkey has issued a decree putting an end to the planting of poppies after this year.

In taking a firm stand against marijuana, Nixon warned that a "permissive" attitude toward drug abuse can weaken "the fabric of American life."

Because the trafficker "destroys the lives of young people," there should be "no sympathy whatever" for him, and "no limit insofar as the criminal penalty is concerned," the president said.

Justice for Individual Top Priority—Fulton

One of the most important projects facing British Columbia's commission on law reform, according to its chairman, is an examination of the administration of justice and organization of the court system.

E. Davie Fulton, Vancouver Queen's Counsel, former Conservative federal cabinet minister and an ex-leader of the provincial Tory party, addressing a meeting of the University Extension Association of Victoria Monday evening, said his three-man commission will be examining British Columbia's legal process with particular reference to the individual in the law.

It is "almost beyond the means" of some people to get redress through the courts, he said, because of anachronisms.

tic, complicated legal processes.

The cost of legal action alone makes it inaccessible to some members of society, he said, and there are other barriers which can bar a grieved person from the courts.

IMMUNITY PROBE

One "anachronism" his commission is already eyeing is that of crown immunity. "B.C. is the only province in Canada that still has that anachronistic system" which can prevent a citizen from laying suit against the government without permission from that same body.

However, he said, Attorney General Leslie Peterson has already authorized an investigation of that situation.

Another anachronism the law reform commission is considering is the one of British Common Law. In 1858, he said, British Columbia inherited, intact, the English Statutes. "There has never been a comprehensive review here."

EXPERT RESEARCH

The British Columbia Law Reform Commission was established by an act of the legislature in 1969 and Fulton was named to head it at that time.

He outlined briefly the approach his commission has taken to its job within the references of the act. Fulton said the approach chosen was to employ a comparatively small staff and to rely heavily on outside research by experts in certain fields.

Hospital Legal Work Completed

The welter of legal paperwork which has delayed reorganization of Queen Victoria Hospital for almost nine months has been cleared.

Leases have been signed, land ownership registered and parties paid, Alex Wood, president of the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society said today.

The society is the public organization which has taken over operation of what was formerly St. Joseph's Hospital from its founders, the Sisters of St. Ann.

Wood said he was notified Monday afternoon by the society's lawyer that all stages in the involved process were now completed.

$360,000 The provincial government now holds title to the hospital, its equipment and land about four acres alongside being bought for expansion.

AGED MAY MISS SEWAGE TAXES

Purchase of the adjacent land from the sisters was handled by the regional hospital board. Price was $360,000.

Hospital and land are leased to the society, and it has been lease details which produced the last delays.

Wood said today there are actually two leases, one covering the hospital building and property and involving the public works department, the other covering medical equipment and involving the health and hospital insurance department.

The society pays a nominal dollar a year on each and their terms are for 21 years.

Wood said completion of the reorganization is a good time to note the society is a public body which invites maximum public participation. Anyone interested in joining should contact information officer Bill Stone at the hospital.

Municipalities will be given the power to grant relief to taxpayers aged 65 or over from costs of sewage control and pollution abatement facilities.

An amendment to this effect to the Municipalities Enabling and Validating Act was introduced in the legislature Monday by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

The minister said it was included in response to a request from Central Saanich but made applicable to all municipalities on the assumption that others might also like the power.

The amendment provides that any deficiency resulting from such tax concessions shall be made up from the general revenue of the municipality. Concession may be granted on "taxes, rates and charges."

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen today termed the legislation "really shallow electioneering bait" as he said it was not part of a comprehensive, well thought out financial scheme to help municipalities.

He pointed out that many people over the age of 65 were "immensely capable" of paying for sewage and pollution control services, while much younger people found extreme difficulty in doing so.

Pollen also said the scheme takes no account of the fact that more than 50 per cent of Victoria's population live in rented accommodation.

Another amendment will make regional district bylaws on soil removal, spraying of pesticides, some pollution matters and a wide range of other matters subject to approval of the minister of municipal affairs.

Burnaby will be empowered to experiment with voting machines under another amendment.

Tree-Saving Law Lauded

North Saanich Mayor Trevor Davis said today his council should have had "faith" in the provincial government and should not have acted so hastily over the Lands End Road tree-clearing issue.

Davis was commenting on legislation introduced Monday in the legislature which would allow North Saanich to seek ratepayer approval for a special ecology fund to preserve trees on private property.

The move comes in response to a request from North Saanich, the mayor said, and he was "very grateful" for it.

Davis issued the original stop-work order on tree-clearing operations at the Lands End Road site, but this was later rescinded by council because the legality of the order was questioned and the owner threatened court action.

The matter has resulted in stormy council meetings in recent months, including centure of Davis himself.

But the mayor said today he feels the provincial government support justifies his earlier stand on the issue, adding that his only regret is that the site in question is now cleared.

You can't have retroactive action on trees. The land now looks like the surface of the moon.

We had so little faith in the provincial government we decided we were powerless to protect the property. We should have realized help was coming and held our ground."

Under amendments to the Municipalities Enabling and Validating Act, introduced Monday by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, the council would be able to enter into an agreement with a landowner for the right of the municipality to preserve the timber on his land for up to 20 years.

If ratepayers approve of a bylaw to establish an ecology fund, no person will be able to cut trees on any parcel of land exceeding two acres.

without the council's consent. Notice of intention to cut trees will be required and the municipality will have 60 days to notify an owner whether it intends to enter into an agreement with him to preserve the trees.

Police Continue Search for Boys

Central Saanich police are still searching peninsula beaches and neighboring islands for traces of Greg Alger, 19960 Chalet, North Saanich, and Richard Cherry, 5311 Alderley, Saanich, who left on a fishing trip Thursday from Island View Beach.

On Friday, a kerosene can and a knapsack, both belonging to Cherry, were found floating south of James Island.

Monday night, a Seaspawn tugboat reported finding a 10-foot boat two miles south of Darcy Island—but this turned out to be a different boat than that used by the boys.

Although Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre officially gave up the search Sunday night, a cutter continued to cruise local waters Monday.

A spokesman said the U.S. Coast Guard is still searching the Juan de Fuca Islands and an RCMP plane, with Central Saanich police chief John Geiling aboard, scoured the area Monday afternoon.

Over the weekend, Central Saanich police were flooded with calls from private boat owners who volunteered to make a search and also directed scores of walkers who covered the beaches from Oak Bay to Sidney.

Q. I was transferred to another city in 1971 and we decided to rent our house rather than sell it. I understand I can deduct capital cost allowance from my rental income but what do I use for a capital cost figure? We lived in the house for years and, with the improvements we made, it's worth a lot more than we paid for it originally.

A. You are entitled to claim capital cost allowance on the fair market value of your house when you started to rent it. This would not include the value of the land.

We Must Be Ready

It seems clear from the comments of scientists and others who have viewed the scene of the Vaneline freighter wreck in Barkley Sound that we have a lot to do in perfecting an organization that can deal quickly and effectively with oil spills in our coastal waters. Observers of activities at the wreck report a long delay in getting the spilled oil contained. A Simon Fraser University professor says it took crews three days to get a boom in place around the ship.

Some persons at the scene were of the opinion that, left alone, the oil would disperse by itself — a view not shared by those who say the oil was eight inches deep in some areas near shore. Another report had it two feet thick near Austin Island. There was said to be confusion among the numerous ships and mop-up equipment sent to remove the oil. It is, of course, important to avoid exaggeration in cases such as the Vaneline. Scarce reports will not help the cause of environmentalists. On the other hand, we cannot rely on favorable winds and tides to save the coast from harm.

While a comprehensive report has not yet been made it is apparent that even if only some of the criticisms are correct there may be much to be done to get an efficient system organized so that oil spills can be met and overcome without delay. The need for trained men and effective methods will become increasingly evident as more and more similar mishaps occur along our shores.

One official has said: "The Pacific is a formidable foe and it is most difficult to control an oil spill on an exposed coast." That will certainly be conceded by seamen and landlubbers alike. But the fact remains that the "formidable foe" must be mastered. Only a major effort is likely to be successful. There will have to be standing arrangements for determining who will be in charge at any particular occurrence and what methods will be most useful. Then all resources should be co-ordinated to achieve a result. Organization cannot be left until the oil is spreading. The problem calls for a fire department approach.

The point gains added emphasis from the Interior Department report which was released in Washington yesterday regarding transport of oil from the Far North. From the point of view of safety for the environment, the Canadian Mackenzie Valley pipeline was favored. But the Alaska pipeline route, with supertanker service down the Pacific Coast, could get under way three years earlier, and the implication is that this consideration would weigh heavily with United States oil interests as well as U.S. defence authorities.

Whatever route is selected, the report observes that "perfect no-spill performance would be unlikely during the lifetime of the pipeline" — and again: "It is evident that no single oil delivery system would be free of environmental effects and of potential threats." Oil tanker spills were expected to average about 140,000 barrels a year, the report said, with fisheries being especially vulnerable. Effects on the environment would go "far beyond" the 940 square miles of land directly involved in the Alaska pipeline from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez.

That is a fair warning by experts who have studied the whole project for the past three years. By every moral and logical aspect, if the oil transport system is to be created, by one route or another, then a first charge on the great profits which are expected should be the costs of adequate provision for preventive arrangements as effective as can be achieved, and similar provision for clean-up and compensation when the inevitable spills occur. Anything less will be simply robbing the environment and the people who own it.

When such decisive action results in police shooting demonstrators in labor troubles, the hopes of Spain's liberals wane, and the country is increasingly beset by doubts and uncertainties.

Hard Fist in Spain

Some years ago, when Generalissimo Francisco Franco set about arranging the succession — choosing Prince Juan Carlos in preference to his father — faint gleams of hope were seen for a restoration of some of the liberties enjoyed by most western countries. Those gleams may still persist, but currently the future looks doubtful to liberals. The Franco regime has responded to dissident opinion with a hard fist.

Open disaffection and violent dissent will not be tolerated and repressive measures will be applied where necessary — so goes the theme of the country's tough law-and-order legislation.

This is the response to increasing student unrest — a gesture of protest against police on the campus — to a more belligerent posture by that faction of labor which opposes the syndicates headed by government appointees, and to the recurring efforts of Basques to acquire freedom.

The political health of the nation is good," says Admiral Luis Carrero Blanco, vice-president of the government and Franco's trusted aide. But to guard this health it was "elementary prudence to act decisively and in time to correct any negative symptoms."

OTTAWA — The federal government has reached a complicated agreement with Quebec on the subject of family income security legislation. This is plainly of political and probably of important constitutional significance. At the same time it has opened a new round of talks with the provinces on the proposed competition act, achieving in the case of Manitoba, an agreement also of political interest but quite devoid of constitutional significance.

In both cases an obvious intent is to clear the legislative path of substantial roadblocks. The prime minister, writing Premier Davis about the understanding with Quebec, states flatly: "the federal government plans to proceed with its family income security plan legislation at the current session of Parliament." As initially presented, it will not provide for the new flexibility outlined in the letter. Mr. Trudeau goes on to say, however, that if it seems desirable after consultation with the provinces, "the federal government would be prepared to recommend to Parliament the amendment of the bill, at the appropriate stage, in a manner to permit it to be implemented."

Less Progress

On other questions which have separated Ottawa and Quebec since the Victoria conference — specifically manpower centres and occupational training allowances — less progress has been made but the outlook has become more optimistic. The principles involved in the family allowance proposal "are clearly capable of extension to other income support programs."

What is proposed at the moment is an arrangement of convenience with a purely statutory basis. However, the prime minister states that the federal government would be willing to contemplate a constitutional guarantee if this seems desirable. The hope is that, with Quebec satisfied on these points, it will now be possible to achieve the Victoria package of constitutional reform.

The proposed competition act has also aroused the hostility of several provincial governments, among them Ontario. At the moment Ottawa's thinking on this subject is obscure. It is known that Mr. Basford's bill will be revised in consideration of many critical representations.

ROBERT ANDRAS

... what is he seeking?

While it seems altogether improbable that the government intends to press ahead with this legislation in the pre-election session, there would be value politically in removing some of the apprehensions entertained in provincial capitals. From this standpoint, the understanding with Manitoba is doubtless helpful.

But what is Mr. Andras seeking from the provinces? He is asking, apparently, that the provinces should agree in advance not to contest the constitutionality of the federal bill. It is not easy to see how Manitoba could have granted prior consent unless it has been given a preview of the legislation which seems impossible when Mr. Andras states that he is "not looked into yet." Language is all important in such complex matters.

Whatever the answer to this riddle, there is a more important point to be made. This is that a law, otherwise unconstitutional, cannot be made constitutional through the mere collusion of governments. Some competent lawyers held that the Basford version of the competition bill was an invasion of provincial jurisdiction. No one outside government is in a position at this time to reach any conclusion about the Andras version because it is not yet public property.

Decision for Court

This much may be said: that the status of the bill, when it emerges, will be determined by the courts as they delimit on the one hand the area of business activity which falls under provincial jurisdiction as coming within property and civil rights and, on the other, the extent of the federal power over trade and commerce. Whether the provinces are accommodating or not, the interests directly affected by the new regime to which Mr. Andras looks forward will be business interests.

It might be supposed from all these federal-provincial conferences and agreements that constitutions exist for the benefit of governments. Let them agree and all will be well. But this is not the case at all. Constitutions are for people and in fact many of the cases which have done most to shape our constitution have resulted from the action of private citizens. We were told for years (although this now seems doubtful) that the merger provisions of the old law were inoperative; if so they were not victims of provincial aggression but of appeals by affected business.

When the government has time for legislation on competition, Mr. Andras will be in a position of political advantage if he can produce a bill which will not draw fire from provincial capitals. But his primary task — and no easy one — is to write legislation with a good chance of surviving court challenge over the next 10 years. The more new ground is broken the more difficult this will be and the greater for some time, to come the uncertainty in the business community.

TIM TRAYNOR

Look at the Race Next Door

WASHINGTON Senator Edmund Muskie must now lead his stunned entourage northward for the next stage of the harrowing preliminaries to the November presidential election.

It is too early to tell how much damage Mr. Muskie sustained when Floridians went to the polls to indicate whom they favored to mount the Democratic party's challenge to Richard Nixon in November. But the Muskie camp could only shudder at the result: Alabama Governor George Wallace, riding a wave of resentment against school busing for integration, being endorsed by over 42 per cent of those taking part, as Democratic party members, in the party's presidential primary.

And, trailing Mr. Wallace, were former vice-president Hubert Humphrey with a respectable 18 per cent of the vote, Senator Henry Jackson of Washington state, with 13 per cent, and then, and only then, Mr. Muskie with a meagre nine per cent.

Proceeding through the lengthy series of primary votes around the country — Florida was the second of 23 scheduled — Mr. Muskie had counted on consolidating his position as the strongest claimant to the leadership of the party and the right to challenge Mr. Nixon. In fact, his Florida showing was totally at odds with this plan. It was the worse for coming on top of a less-than-impressive win in the earlier New Hampshire primary.

Intense Pressure

So now there is the most intense pressure for him to produce in the next primaries; against a limited field of opponents in Illinois on March 21 and against a much fuller field in Wisconsin on April 4. He must do well, particularly in Wisconsin, if he is not to be reduced to just another among the swarm of contenders for the Democratic prize.

Some will be inclined to say he is already in that position as a result of the rebuff by Florida voters. This overlooks some important points.

The first is the overwhelming impact of the busing issue on the Florida primary contest. Mr. Wallace played to the widespread desire to express resentment about court and federal government steps to bring about large-scale school busing to achieve racial balance in schools. To an extent which was not foreseen, Floridians appear to have put the desire to make a protest above a sober decision as to who would make the best Democratic presidential candidate.

Mr. Wallace, of course, insists that he was seen by the voters as a serious candidate for the party leadership, as well as an outlet for protest. This is at odds with what many voters told interviewers before the election. And there is a further aspect of the situation which might be obscured by the Wallace line.

The fact is that in Florida, a southern and traditionally a Democratic state, there are large numbers of voters who are normally members of the Democratic party, but who in recent years have become attuned to the Republican party of Richard Nixon. A good number of those who voted in the Democratic party primary were thus not true members and were not concerned about the choosing of a party candidate capable of defeating Mr. Nixon.

SENATOR MUSKIE
... stunned entourage

To the contrary, it was not difficult to find voters who saw Mr. Wallace as a convenient vehicle for protesting busing and embarrassing the leading Democratic party candidates at the same time. These were nominal Democratic party voters who had no qualms about voting for Mr. Wallace in the primary, because they meant to support President Nixon in November. (Mr. Nixon won Florida in the 1968 election.)

It is thus premature to write Mr. Muskie down on the basis of the Florida result. At the same time, there is no doubt that he is headed toward a fierce struggle with Senator Humphrey, beginning with Wisconsin and continuing through primaries in such key industrial states as Ohio, Michigan and Pennsylvania.

The showing of Sen. Jackson, who stresses a strong defence posture, and to a lesser extent that of New York Mayor John Lindsay, pave the way for a continuing role. Mr. Wallace has received a

Also, that according to the 2515-page "Oxford Universal Dictionary," 1955 edition, the word sophisticated cannot possibly be applied to such an object as an ocean boom.

If the boom were really sophisticated, it would be useless, or almost so, for the task in hand. The word has been in use at least as far back as the closing years of the 16th century. But perhaps a more suitable comparison is found in a quotation of 1831:

Some readers, in a valiant effort to stem the rising cost of education, were trying to bring back "the little red school houses" of old. It is unfortunate, that in their zeal, they made no effort to analyze the issues or discover the true facts.

The Board of School Trustees of Greater Victoria, District 61, or any other district to my knowledge, has never included a swimming pool as a part of any of its projects. Swimming programs in this district have all been conducted at municipally owned pools. — John Silwell, 1829 San Lorenzo Ave.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of March 21, 1912:

The automobile industry and the recreation of motoring have both been almost starting in their growth and popularity, especially in Victoria which, so far removed from the seat of operations, did not have any cars at all until some time after these swifter forms of wheeled vehicles were quite generally used in the bigger cities of Europe and America. So that when in 1902 Dr. Hart introduced his "Oldsmobile" runabout to Victorians, the little vehicle was regarded with horrified disfavor.

The Pond and the Lily: Time Runs Out Quickly

There is a French children's riddle about a pond with a water lily in it. The lily doubles in size every day. In 30 days it will cover the entire pond, killing the other creatures in it. The owner wants to avoid that, but he sees no hurry: he will cut the plant back when it covers half the pond. When will that be?

The answer is the 29th day. He has one day to save his pond.

The story is told in "The Limits To Growth," a report by a team of scientists to the Club of Rome, an international group concerned with the future of man and the earth. The report has just been published as a paperback book. It is the most fascinating and the most disturbing book I have read in a very long time. The lily pond indicates why.

Like the lily, man's impact on the earth is growing exponentially: doubling every so often. For example, the population curve is rising so fast that the world total now doubles about every 33 years. Industrial production is also growing exponentially, as are pollution and the demand for food and the use of mineral resources.

And like the pond to the lily, there are limits to the growth of all these factors in human existence. The earth is finite.

The Club of Rome report, based on computer models, tries to explore where the limits are and what will happen when they are reached. It concludes that, if the present trends continue, "the limits to growth on this planet will be reached sometime within the next 100 years. The most probable result will be a rather sudden and uncontrollable decline in both population and industrial capacity."

That conclusion has already begun to arouse the sharpest controversy. Some economists and scientists consider the computer models inadequate, the analysis too simple.

The authors of the report — Dennis L. Meadows of M.I.T. and others — would readily admit the inadequacy of this first effort to measure the whole trend of man's relationship with his environment.

Their object is not to provide final answers now. It is to make the world realize there is a problem and start to think about it.

The sense of earthly limits

By ANTHONY LEWIS
The New York Times

(First of Two Articles)

has begun to come into our consciousness without any need for a scientific report. We know that it is increasingly difficult to find a place to build power plants urgently needed in the United States. We know that the catch of ocean fish is dropping. We know how difficult it is to dispose of our industrial and household wastes.

The special value of this report is its compelling exposition of the truth ecologists have been trying to teach us: that the elements of life are interconnected. There is no easy way out when we approach a limit in one area, because anything we do to avoid the limit will have consequences elsewhere.

Consider the example of oil. The most skeptical critics of ecological thinking recognize that we are rapidly approaching the limit of ordinary estimated oil reserves. The critics deal with that by saying that we shall simply get our oil from new sources — say oil-shale rock.

But massive efforts to extract oil from shale would have consequences. There would be a large disposal problem, for example, and large amounts of new electric power would be required. What would fuel the generating plants — nuclear power? But the relatively few nuclear generators we have now are already creating such a problem of radio-active waste that the chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission has suggested rocketing it to the sun.

Or consider food production. The green revolution has allowed us to multiply crop yields, but people tend to forget that there are costs — as always. Fertilizer must be used intensively, so much more has to be produced, and that takes energy. Fertilizer pollutes nearby streams as it runs off the land, and it gradually lowers the fertility of the soil. Then more capital has to be invested to produce the same crops, and so on.

Those who advocate economic growth as the sovereign remedy for our social ills ought at least to expose themselves to the Meadows report. If they did they could no longer content themselves with the simple notion that ecological limits are only a matter of resources, for which substitutes can always be found. They would begin to consider resources together with food, pollution, population, industrial production: they would begin to understand how deceptive it is to think of a limitless lily pond.

The Club of Rome says that the purpose of its report is to provoke thought, not despair. And the thinking cannot be left to the ecological enthusiasts. It would be quite wrong, intellectually and morally, to suggest that resolution of the dilemma of economic growth be left to those who have identified it. The decisions required are political: they are for all of us.

Inching Toward Disaster

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

When the tanker Arrow went aground in Chedabucto Bay on February 4, 1970, half its cargo of 108,000 barrels of oil spilled into the water and polluted 125 miles of Nova Scotia coastline. Cleanup expenses cost the federal Government about $4-million, the toll of marine and bird life could not be estimated and beaches were ruined for months.

A couple of weeks ago, the sixth supertanker to call at the Point Tupper, N.S., refinery of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. threaded its way through Chedabucto Bay and up the Canso Strait to the unloading dock at Point Tupper. The Universe Japan, 32,562 tons deadweight, unloaded 2.35 million barrels of oil before sailing off to Kuwait and Iran for more.

In comparison with the Japan, the Arrow is in the rowboat class. The 1,133-foot-long Japan draws 81.5 feet of water when fully laden and carries as much crude oil as Canada's domestic wells produce in a day and a half. The vessel takes nearly two miles to stop when travelling at her 15.75-knot cruising speed.

To dock, she must inch her way sideways up to massive fenders. Navigation experts calculate that a speed of one-third of a knot at dock impact would be enough to wreck both ship and dock — and threaten the waters of the Canso Strait with the spillage of those 2.35 million barrels of crude. The Arrow disaster would be a drop in the ocean by comparison.

Could it happen? The pilot who brought the ship in was happy to get bright weather for the trip through Chedabucto Bay and the strait. He contrasted it with the snow squalls that occurred when he brought in the 220,000-ton tanker Osthay a few weeks earlier.

"It was so bad I had to get the tugs to locate the buoys for me. The weather closed in on us after we had started out on our run into the terminal."

U.S. experts, with much more experience than Canadians, regard spills as inevitable. That part of our coastline does not boast the country's best weather.

The government, through Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, recently claimed to have contingency plans ready for anything. That might be comforting if we had not queried, a few months ago, Ottawa's contingency plans for possible oil spillage at Sable Island or the seas around it. At that time, we discovered the government had no official plans but only incomplete base studies on the present state of the environment to be compared with the state resulting from a possible oil accident after the event.

Are we to depend on Gulf to undertake a satisfactory salvage operation after the event? Lt.-Cmdr. D. B. Hope, who was in charge of naval diving operations after the Arrow disaster, declared bluntly at the ensuing inquiry that "catering to these private interests has become decidedly unrealistic."

We agree as we soberly ponder: the consequences of the smallest error in a ship so large.

Early in the Diefenbaker years, it became the practice to have a member of the Opposition as chairman of the House Public Accounts Committee. That is, the government relinquished for this committee only its control of the committee's leadership by instructing its members to vote for a MP chosen by the leader of the "official" opposition.

The Opposition chairmanship and some recent harsh criticism by the committee of the HMCS Bonaventure extravagance, disguised the brutal reality that the committee only meets and does its work when and if the government wills it. In fact, the committee is several years behind in its examination of both the old accounts and the many old recurring sores exposed by Max Henderson.

The Public Accounts Committee is far from a free-wheeling, self-determining, force of independent scrutiny. After a decade under an Op-erican good thing about having one suit of clothes — you've always got your pencil."

—Kin Hubbard

One of the most closely guarded White House secrets concerns President Nixon's grey suit. And small wonder. Was there ever such suit? Could any suit last so long — even with two pairs of pants?

An examination of back photographic files will show that he wore it as a congressman, and as a senator.

He wore it as a vice-presidential candidate with Eisenhower in 1956. His little dog, Chequers, undoubtedly sniffed those everlasting cuffs.

He wore it in Russia when he wagged his finger under Khrushchev's nose, and in South America when the students hissed and booed.

He wore it all through the 1960 campaign against Jack Kennedy. It was perfect, of course, for the twilight years in the New York law office.

And since he became President he has worn it every day.

There is a rumor that there is really more than one suit, and that there are carefully designed counterfeits which can be changed without anyone being the wiser.

If there are copies they are cleverly done. The trip to China was the big test. Look at the pictures carefully. There's no doubt. It is the Nixon suit. And — in diplomatic terms — the perfect choice.

It is cut better than Chairman Mao's, but is still not flashy.

Most great national leaders bring some degree of zip to the international sartorial scene.

Roosevelt sported a cape, and a long cigarette holder. Churchill switched about from siren suits, to bowler hats.

Pierre Trudeau's picture file is perhaps the most spectacular of all. He has been photographed in turbans and zorro hats. He has been seen upside down in his batwing suit in mid-air, and right-side up on a snowmobile, swathed in furs.

Even Calvin Coolidge once wore an Indian war bonnet. Even Chairman Mao once put on his trunks and braved the murky waters of the Yangtze.

But none of this nonsense for Richard Nixon. Last week it was reported that he went for a swim before breakfast at Key Biscayne, Florida. Did he wear the suit — or grey worsted boxer shorts? Does he sleep in the suit — or does he change into grey flannel pajamas? With cuffs?

Those who know the answers to these mysteries remain silent. In political terms the image makers are probably pretty happy with the Nixon look. His great appeal has been to the "silent majority" and certainly the grey look is silent. It is also utterly neutral, and is the perfect protective coloration for one who stalks the political jungle.

Perhaps this explains why Mr. Nixon's political victims never seem to know where the arrows come from.

position chairman, it has not yet developed a formula agreeable to the government for final disposition of all the issues which the Auditor-General and the committee raises. Of course, protagonists for the committee claim that it sheds further light on outrageous lapses.

Echo Chamber

The Auditor-General has however already made the critical case in his annual printed report. The committee is merely a second chance, echo chamber for his work. This is useful enough but the committee is unnecessary to his functioning. The tabling of his report before the Commons simply means he has the independent right to publish his findings without getting a minister's approval.

For all his independence Max Henderson has put little of his considerable intellect and energies toward regularizing his relationship with the public accounts committee. He hasn't popularized a demand for a routine examination and disposal of his cases, including penalties, departments, firings, transfers or better, a simple "finger" of the senior executive responsible for the failure.

Mr. Henderson's defence in such a judgment would be that he has been harassed for five or six years by senior officials, especially in treasury board and in the privy council office. These powerful men have grown angrier and angrier over the critical judgments Mr. Henderson issues. These, they say, are more ethical and partisan than accounting in nature, and criticizing policies determined by politicians, policies which are none of Mr. Henderson's business.

The senior officials got a former deputy minister turned politician to carry the fight against Mr. Henderson.

This is the Hon. Bud Drury, President of the Treasury Board. By putting a firm ceiling on the money Henderson can offer and by luring away his best people to take jobs at higher rates than he has available, Mr. Drury has hobbed Henderson's work. Mr. Drury instituted such harassment several years ago, certainly expecting that Henderson would play the mandarin game. That is, he would quiet down and cut his criticism in lieu of higher pay for himself and his staff.

HENDERSON
Mandarin after him

Mr. Henderson is a rather unlovable man — indeed he is snobbish and arrogant and a Tory appointment,

He is also stubborn and highhanded. When he refused to play the old Ottawa ball with Gordon Robertson, clerk of the Privy Council and Simon Riesman, Deputy Minister of Finance, they raised Bud Drury over a year ago. Drury brought in a Bill to limit the Auditor-General's critical range, but the government backed off. The unanimity of media support for the Auditor-General baffled it and Mr. Drury but dropping the Bill didn't mean the other tactics were dropped. Their squeeze has made him late with his report.

He Can't Win

In the long run Mr. Henderson cannot win. He only has a couple of years left before retirement.

It is an outside possibility that a new government may appreciate the kind of work Mr. Henderson does and the next appointment will not be an amenable, amiable cipher. It is only an "outside" possibility. MP's, Ministers, even Prime Ministers come and go, the Civil Service goes on and on ... and its top chap wants the Auditor-General gilded.

Cambodia Capital Attacked

PHNOM PENH (CP) — Communist troops hit the Cambodian capital with 200 rockets today, devastated three sections of the city, and killed at least 70 persons and wounded 120 by official estimate.

A Reuter dispatch reported that the Cambodian command said 25 of the dead were "massacred" by Communist troops who attacked civilians in their homes. They included women and children.

The rocket bombardment was the heaviest attack on Cambodia's capital since the Vietnam war spread to the neighboring country two years ago.

Many of the casualties were refugees driven from their homes by the war. One entire refugee shanty town was wiped out, and more than 100 huts were levelled.

Cambodian helicopter gunships patrolled the outskirts of the city after the attack and strafed at least 10 suspected rocket launching sites, all within an eight-mile radius of the centre of the city.

A Cambodian military spokesman also reported heavy fighting in the district town of Neak Leong, 32 miles southeast of Phnom Penh on the highway to Saigon. The spokesman said it appeared that the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were trying to cut the highway and move westward toward the capital.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pat McGeer, B.C. Liberal leader, has lashed back at two senior union officials who accused him last week of being incompetent to deal with labor issues.

McGeer said in a statement that Monty Alton of the United Steelworkers of America, and Senator Ed Lawson, Canadian director of the Teamsters Union, represent "the two internationals that have been the most discriminatory against workers who belong to Canadian unions."

On Friday the two union officials had criticized an address to the legislature by McGeer in which the Liberal leader called for a charter of rights for Canadian workers to protect against domination by U.S.-based unions.

In his statement, McGeer said "Monty Alton speaks for the union that tried to B.C. Working men in Washington and suspended them for advocating membership in a Canadian union."

Senator Lawson speaks for the union which was taken to court in B.C. for being a party to a restrictive

Store Complex Reviewed

Plans for a $1 million shopping centre in Oak Bay, shelved since 1969, may be revived.

At Monday's council meeting a letter was received from the developers, Adirondack Properties Ltd. of Vancouver, stating they wanted to proceed with plans and pricing.

APPROVED EARLIER

The project, to be built on Kelly Douglas property at Foul Bay and Cadboro Bay, was approved by council April 30, 1969.

The plans then called for a one-storey, 30,000-square-foot building, containing a Super Valu store, bank and pharmacy.

On Monday the matter was referred to "A" committee.

A delegation from the Victoria Symphony Society attended

Monday's meeting and was told Oak Bay would support the society's request for an increased grant of $15,000 from the seven municipalities that belong to the intermunicipal committee.

Society spokesman Allard Purdy said that 40 per cent of the money for the orchestra came from box office receipts, the remainder having to be raised mostly from grants. The payroll, council was told, amounted to $200,000.

A delegation from the Greater Victoria Public Library's board also attended Monday's meeting to explain its new budget and increases.

Chairman Brian Tobin told council the increase was the result of expanded services and the new centennial branch libraries.

The budget was endorsed and accepted.

PHNOM PENH (CP) — Communist troops hit the Cambodian capital with 200 rockets today, devastated three sections of the city, and killed at least 70 persons and wounded 120 by official estimate.

A Reuter dispatch reported that the Cambodian command said 25 of the dead were "massacred" by Communist troops who attacked civilians in their homes. They included women and children.

The rocket bombardment was the heaviest attack on Cambodia's capital since the Vietnam war spread to the neighboring country two years ago.

Many of the casualties were refugees driven from their homes by the war. One entire refugee shanty town was wiped out, and more than 100 huts were levelled.

Cambodian helicopter gunships patrolled the outskirts of the city after the attack and strafed at least 10 suspected rocket launching sites, all within an eight-mile radius of the centre of the city.

A Cambodian military spokesman also reported heavy fighting in the district town of Neak Leong, 32 miles southeast of Phnom Penh on the highway to Saigon. The spokesman said it appeared that the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were trying to cut the highway and move westward toward the capital.

Muskie Tries Again

CHICAGO (AP) — Senator Edmund Muskie of Maine battles two Democratic rivals in dual Illinois presidential primary contests today, seeking a boost for his shaken White House campaign in the months leading to the nominating convention in July.

Two million Illinois voters were expected to cast ballots, well over half of them in the Democratic primary.

Pollution Tax Out

Resources Minister Ray Williston rejected requests for a pollution tax in B.C. Monday by saying he won't jeopardize jobs in struggling industries.

"Not one of the pulp mills built in the past decade has paid off five cents of the interest on the capital of the plant," Williston told the legislature.

"I'm not making that position any more difficult for anyone as far as the job base is concerned."

Williston was replying to Alex Macdonald (NDP-Vancouver East) who had proposed a tax on polluters to help hurry clean-up efforts.

The minister said Quebec has taken its environmental legislation right off the books to assist troubled industries in that province.

INCENTIVE NEEDED

"Surely the minister isn't saying these industries are so hard up they couldn't pay an effluent disposal fee," Macdonald said.

Macdonald said a graduated tax — getting heavier in succeeding years — is a necessary incentive to get industries to cut pollution.

Ernie Hall (NDP-Surrey) said Williston had neglected to mention that pulp mills had been built "to secure the supply of timber" and the minister had made no mention of the financial advantages of depreciation.

Macdonald also urged that an environmental bill of rights be put on the law books making it possible to go to court for damages to the environment.

'BALONEY' SLICED UP

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell got some delayed reaction Monday night for a remark he made several weeks ago about art and music as they are taught in schools being "baloney."

Greater Victoria school trustee Dr. Carron Jameson said Campbell's statement was made "with the characteristic delicacy of Attila the Hun and the treatment by the Campbells of the McDonald clan at Glencoe in 1862."

The school board went on record unanimously as saying the art and music courses in the schools are "worthwhile, satisfying and invigorating."

Later in the meeting, Jameson suggested that Campbell take advantage of the school board's plan to televise the BBC production "Civilization" for the benefit of school children.

B.C. Environment Report? (Some Time Next Year)

Resources Minister Ray Williston said Monday he won't be able to file a report on activities of the environment and land use committee until at least next year.

The minister was being pressed in the legislature at least to outline what the committee has done since it was created last year. Williston said there isn't enough staff to put together a report this year.

But they're being hired, he said, and reports will be available in future years.

CAPTAIN COOK?

This upset Robert Williams (NDP-Vancouver East) who produced two large and recent government newspaper ads on pollution policy. Williams said for a "fraction of the cost" of the ads Williston could have prepared a report.

One ad referred to Captain Cooke sailing into Nootka Sound in 1778 and said B.C.'s fame began then. Reading the ad, Williams said it claims the government has found it "impossible" to control pollution throughout the province.

Williams said the ad itself took a "snobbish, arrogant, white-man attitude" toward history by not mentioning that Indians were here before Captain Cook.

The environment and land use committee is a group of five cabinet members headed by Williston with authority to make policy decisions on pollution control.

Williams pressed Williston to explain what land use committee policy is on extending the Pacific Great Eastern Railway to the Yukon, on preserving parkland in the coal-rich Elk Valley, on the future of the Bulkley Valley area in the wake of a major forest company's collapse and in major new highway and pipelines plans.

PARK COST

Dave Broussard (Liberal — North Vancouver-Capilano) asked the minister to explain the committee's role in the loss of Brent Mountain, a prized provincial park area, to an Okanagan ski development.

Williston said there was not one major industrial proposal last year requiring the attention of the committee. He added: "There isn't even a major new mine development on the horizon."

Dennis Coeke (NDP — New Westminster) said the committee shouldn't need major proposals, it could hold public hearings on land use and involve ordinary citizens.

Sewage Challenge Issued

Greater Victoria school board Monday night issued a challenge to Victoria's senior medical health officer by deciding to install a secondary sewage treatment plant at View Royal Elementary.

The board, skirting an ultimatum issued by Dr. J. L. Whitbread at the end of last week, decided to install the secondary treatment plant at the school despite Whitbread's statements that it will not be approved.

Whitbread has told the board that the only way to work on the malfunctioning sewage system at View Royal is to install a holding tank and transport the effluent to a suitable site for disposal.

The holding tank and transportation of effluent is the only alternate method that will receive our approval," he told the board in a letter dated Thursday.

Whitbread told the board that if the action is not taken within six weeks, "the school should be closed and the children accommodated elsewhere."

Trustee Peter Bunn, construction and maintenance chairman, said the board is challenging Dr. Whitbread with this action at this time. That's exactly what we are doing."

Bunn said installation of the secondary treatment plant at the school will cost the board about $8,400.

As part of the motion for approval of the expenditure, the board agreed to write Whitbread to ask for an extension of his six-week deadline to June 30 of this year, when school is out.

Trustee Dr. Carron Jameson termed Whitbread's ultimatum "a disgrace."

"He is trying to bludgeon us into a position between two bodies — one that wants sewers in the area and one that doesn't. We are being made the goat of it," he said.

The board was told that to truck effluent away from View Royal would cost $3,000 immediately and about $4,000 per year afterwards.

Whitbread apparently has told board officials that installation of sewers in View Royal is "imminent." The trustees, however, had a difficult time believing that.

Trustee Hal Knight said View Royal residents have twice turned down sewers and that they are now building their own treatment plants, themselves, exactly opposite to getting ready for sewer installation.

Trustee Walter Donald said the dumping of 7,000 gallons of sewage per week into a field and ditch near the school is an "irresponsible action" that should be stopped as soon as possible.

He only voted for the motion when assured that the sewage now leaking from the system at the school will be held in the septic tank and trucked out when necessary.

Donald said to get into a "power confrontation with Whitbread" is not in the best interests of the students of View Royal.

Board chairman Allan McKinnon said Whitbread has authorized a similar secondary treatment plant at Royal Oak school in Saanich school district and that the board should go ahead and build its own "and then ask Dr. Whitbread for his blessing."

Fee for Rezoning Illegal: Curtis

Victoria city council's decision to levy a fee for rezoning applications is illegal, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said Monday night.

He told council the practice is followed in some municipalities but it is not permitted under the Municipal Act.

However, council agreed that charging fees is desirable if the act is changed to allow this.

The clerk was instructed to draw up a resolution urging an amendment to the legislation for submission to the annual meeting of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities, which will be held at Powell River May 12 and 13.

In other rezoning business, council decided to call a public hearing on applications to rezone three separate parcels of property which are proposed for development under the tri-government dispersed housing scheme for low-income families in Saanich.

The sites are on Cedar Hill Cross Road, Alder Street and a third bounded by Judah Street, Bremerton Street and Peto Place.

Nats Capture Finale, Cougars Best on Year

To coin an overused cliche, Victoria Cougars lost the battle but won the war.

Cougars, minus two players injured in Sunday's brawl in New Westminster, bowed 5-1 to their expansion twins, the Vancouver Nats, Monday in Victoria's final game of the season before 1,805 fans at Kerrisdale Arena.

Despite the loss, Victoria finished in fifth place ahead of the last-place Nats who still have two games to play.

Cougars hold a five-point margin on the Nats.

Although the season ended with six straight losses, the Cougars won the season-long fight with the Nats in the standings and against each other. Cougars won six of 10 games.

Since both teams were out of the playoff hunt early that's about the only accomplishment they had to look forward to.

Monday night, the Nats were full value for the victory. The first period was scoreless; mainly due to the goaltending of Victoria's Darrel Fedorak who made 11 saves as the Nats enjoyed a wide edge in play.

Midway through the second period, the Nats exploded for two goals in only 23 seconds, then went on to ram two more goals by Fedorak before the period ended.

STEWART GETS THREE

Gord Stewart was the triggerman scoring two of the goals and assisting on a third. The 17-year-old centre scored his third goal in the third period, his 30th of the season.

It was big night for the native of Moose Jaw, who carted away a color television set when he was named the Nats' most valuable player during Vancouver's awards night. He also was named the club's top rookie.

Doug Sweering and Dave Andrichuk completed the Nats' scoring while Greg Robinson ruined goalie Jack Cummings' shutout scoring with less than three minutes to play.

In Monday's other game, Medicine Hat Tigers warmed up for the playoffs hammering Saskatoon Blades 9-4 as the Tigers completed their season.

Rookie Boyd Anderson sparked the Tigers, scoring three goals much to the delight of 3,246 fans in Medicine Hat.

This isn't just scuffling for action; this is for the dough. Winner of each event gets $1,500, the loser $1,000, with the overall winner getting $1,500 extra. Which could make it a good pay day for three weeks work, if Thorburn can go all the way.

Ex-Champ Next Test In Thorburn Title Bid

Cliff Thorburn is all 24 years of age now, and within a month or so he will know if his life's dream is just a plane trip to England away.

Thorburn is an ex-Victorian who has switched his geographical allegiance to Vancouver because the action is there even if he can't get as many bets down as he once did.

He also happens to be the very best snooker player in North America. That's why dream world keeps popping up. Next November the world championships will be held in England again, and, as North American champion, Thorburn gets an automatic invitation and a seat into the quarter finals. For him, that's Valhalla.

Meanwhile, he is about to find out just how good he really is. If last year's victory in the North American championships didn't prove it. In that event he defeated Kenny Shea of Halifax, 36 matches to 15, in a best-of-71 series. Two weeks ago he went to Halifax and did it again to Shea.

Tom Brown night in Calgary there is a sterner test. Thorburn meets the former world champion John Spencer of England in the first of three matches, each a best of 72 affair, the two succeeding six-day events being in Edmonton and at Vancouver's Exhibition Gardens.

This isn't just scuffling for action; this is for the dough. Winner of each event gets $1,500, the loser $1,000, with the overall winner getting $1,500 extra. Which could make it a good pay day for three weeks work, if Thorburn can go all the way.

No Side Bets, and None Last Time

Besides, if he is not getting rich, he is getting by. "I have won a couple of tournaments since the North American," he said, "and feel I can do well against Spencer."

"No," he laughed, "I don't think there will be any side bets, not this time."

"And not many last time, in Toronto," he admitted. "Nobody wants to," he suggested. Which makes sense, because Thorburn hasn't lost to anybody lately, when the money showed.

But with Spencer as the foe, there is possibly much more on the line. Because until last month, Spencer was the world champ. That was until he was beaten by an Irishman Alex Higgins. "He is only 22," Thorburn said of Higgins, "and must be good."

But now for Thorburn the recognition factor comes to the fore and is all important. If Thorburn can beat Spencer . . . "I plan to go to England," he said. If he can't . . . he isn't even considering that eventually.

"I'm playing as well as ever," he said of a career that began one month before his 16th birthday. "That's when I quit high school (Oak Bay), and started hanging around pool halls."

Since then, if it hasn't been exactly the case of carrying a lard skin case in the manner of Minnesota Fats from town to town, Thorburn has been moving on and, more important, winning. The small club games are a thing of the past.

How to Win: Don't Leave an Opening

He conducts clinics, too, and for four dollars a head he'll give a group of 10 or more an hour of his time.

Individual attention comes higher. A year ago it was $10 an hour, "but the price has gone up," says Thorburn.

"I can teach them too much in a whole hour," he said, "and for $10, it isn't worth it. That's what I've got against private lessons."

Still, if the price is right, he'll listen.

Why not? Already he has had two perfect breaks of 147; last year in Vancouver he had one break of 146 in competition and that broke the late George Chenier's old Canadian record of 144. And George is a member of Canada's Sports Hall of Fame. Thus Thorburn can command more attention now.

But one quick secret for the better snooker player.

"Never give your opponent an opening." In Snooker it means:

"If you must, leave the cue ball on the bottom rail, with nothing to shoot at."

Which proves again that Barnum was right. "Never give a sucker an even break," he said.

This might explain, too, why Thorburn has trouble getting his money down. The more people read about him, the better they think he is. And right now, there is none better. So why bet?

STICK-SWINGERS HAILED BY CHIEF

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Dennis Hextall of Minnesota North Stars and Wayne Cashman of Boston Bruins have been summoned to a meeting with president Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League and face possible disciplinary action for a stick-swinging incident.

Hextall and Minnesota general manager Wren Blair left for Montreal Monday night for a meeting this morning with Campbell.

Cashman and Bruins' general manager Milt Schmidt also were summoned. Bill Friday, the referee in Sunday's Boston-Minnesota game, apparently will attend the meeting, too.

The clash between Cashman and Hextall occurred near the end of the second period of a nationally televised game at the Boston Garden Sunday, which the Bruins won 7-3.

Blair reminded Campbell that the timing of the meeting would prevent Hextall from playing tonight at home against California Seals.

"Don't worry about that," Campbell was quoted as saying. "Hextall won't be playing in that one anyway."

Scheduling Problems

SEATTLE (AP) — An interlocking schedule for next season between the Western Hockey League and the Central Hockey League has been postponed because of "insurmountable scheduling problems," the WHL announced Thursday.

The interlocking schedules, planned for the 1972-73 season, will be put off until 1973-74. The merger had been announced Jan. 25.

WHL president Bill MacFarland said his league's season starts later and runs 10 days longer than the CHL season.

Quamichan Re却ns

Quamichan of Duncan retained the Vancouver Island junior high school rugby championship with a 6-0 victory over St. Michael's University School in the final of an eight-team tournament at the weekend.

Don Jones scored a try and the conversion was made by Bruce Eaton.

Other schools in the tourney were Colquitz, Mt. Newton, Oak Bay, Elizabeth Fisher, Lansdowne and Highrock.

Alberni Advances

PORT ALBERNI — Keith Ralston's goal with 1:27 remaining in the third period gave Port Alberni a 3-2 victory over Quesnel Kangaroos and sent the Island club into the B.C. intermediate hockey finals for the Coy Cup.

Alberni won the best-of-three series 2-1 and will meet New Westminster Flyers in the provincial final.

By The Canadian Press

John McLellan, recovering from an ulcer condition for the last four weeks, hopes to rejoin Toronto Maple Leafs behind the bench by Friday as the Leafs enter the stretch drive for National Hockey League playoff berth.

McLellan underwent further tests Monday for what he has called "a big-league ulcer."

and said he will learn the results today.

"However, I'm feeling much better," he said Monday night. "I don't think I'll be back to work Wednesday night (against Montreal Canadiens) but I could be back Friday in Vancouver."

McLellan, in his third season as coach of the Leafs, went into hospital Feb. 23 following Toronto's 5-4 loss to the Red Wings in Detroit. He spent four days in hospital before going to Florida for a week's rest.

During his absence, his spot behind the bench was handled by club vice-president King Clancy who led the Leafs to six victories and two ties while losing two games.

MPs CLAIM TAX CUTS VOTE SWEETENER

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's latest tax cuts edged closer to Commons passage Monday although opposition MPs described them as strictly an election-time sweetener, unfair to those on lower incomes and ineffective in creating jobs.

Announced in a budget statement last Oct. 14, the reductions amount to three per cent of tax payable for individuals and seven per cent of tax payable for corporations. They applied for the last six months of 1971, and the latest bill would apply them until the end of 1972, in line with the October announcement.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West), his party's financial critic, and a battery of New Democrat speakers delivered most of the criticism of the measure.

A last-ditch NDP motion seeking to delay the bill was voted down 88 to 20, only a sprinkling of Social Credit MPs supporting the New Democrats while Conservatives voted with the Liberal majority.

Final reading seemed assured but the clock had run out on the sitting and the measure was left over, probably until Wednesday.

Standing in the 261-seat House, Liberal 149, Conservative 72, NDP 25, Social Credit 13, Independent 2, Independent Liberal 1, vacant 2.

DEBATE ENVIRONMENT

Today the House debates environmental policy, chosen as a topic by the NDP on one of the days made available for opposition parties to initiate debate.

Mr. Lambert said the fact that tax cuts apply only to the end of 1972 makes it clear they are "one-shot, election-year stuff." The government must call an election by June, 1973, but it is widely expected to come some time this year.

He joined with Edward Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby) in asking that an upper limit of $60 be put on the reduction for individuals. They argued that this would ensure maximum benefit from the cut for those in lower and middle income groups while denying the hefty reductions that would accrue to richer taxpayers in the government's across-the-board plan.

Mr. Broadbent presented some comparisons. A married man with two children and $2,000 taxable income would save $2.25 a year. The same man with $8,000 would save about $49. At $50,000, the saving would be $625.

The man "just eking out an existence" at $100,000 a year would save more than $1,500.

AMENDMENT BEATEN

Mr. Broadbent put an amendment that the individual tax cut be 60 per cent of taxable income or $60, whichever is less, saying this would ensure the fullest reduction for the lower income levels and no windfall for the rich.

Chou Reaffirms Indochina Pledge

By JOHN BURNS
Special to the Times

PEKING — In his first public statement since the Nixon visit, Premier Chou En-lai Saturday night reiterated China's unflinching support for its Indochinese allies, condemning as fruitless all "military threats" or political schemes" that seek to deprive them of victory.

At a banquet honoring exiled Cambodian leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the Chinese premier declared it to be "the international duty of the Chinese people to render all-out support and assistance to the Cambodian and other Indochinese peoples in their struggle against U.S. aggression."

UNSHAKABLE

"We have been doing so in the past, and we will continue to do so in the future. This stand of ours is firm and unshakable," the premier said.

The speech appeared to be a public restatement of assurances the premier is reported to have given the Indochinese leaders in briefings that came shortly after President Richard Nixon's departure for home at the end of last month.

Sihanouk has revealed that both he and Pham Van Dong, premier of North Vietnam, were briefed by Chou on his discussions with the president. Though the prince did not say, diplomatic sources have confirmed that the briefings took place in Hanoi.

ALLAY FEARS. The thrust of the briefings, and of Saturday night's speech, was to allay fears

one-shot stuff

Backed by the Conservatives, the motion was easily defeated by the Liberals on a headcount vote.

Conservative-NDP co-operation broke down when debate zeroed in on the corporate tax reduction.

Mr. Lambert plumped for a 10-per-cent corporate tax reduction and criticized the one-year limit.

The higher rate would do much for small corporations, such as husband-and-wife businesses, the Conservative MP said. He did not agree with the usual NDP outlook in this regard — that corporations should be "put to death or taxed to death."

It was meaningless to give corporations a tax reduction only over 18 months in hopes of stimulating activity and creating jobs. With a reduction in view only for that period, no large corporation would embark on expensive investment in new machinery and plant, the only way that extra jobs would be generated.

New Democrats agreed, but for different reasons, that generation of new jobs would be unlikely to result from the corporate tax reduction.

REJECTS THEORY

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) said tax concessions to industry do not stimulate the economy. This was achieved when consumer demand increased.

So Canadians were getting the worst of both possible worlds with high tax remissions to corporations and meagre ones to the consumers who had it in their power to give the economy some lift.

He asked Pat Mahoney, minister of state with special financial responsibilities, whether the government could point to any stimulation of the economy or creation of jobs from the decreased corporation tax now that it had been in effect for eight months.

Mr. Mahoney said it is impossible to separate this factor from other government efforts, but the overall government program certainly had boosted the economy.

210,000 in Quebec to Strike Friday

QUEBEC (CP) — A threat of a general strike Friday by 210,000 Quebec public service employees has picked up momentum following rejection by provincial government negotiators of a union demand for a wage minimum of $100 a week.

A government spokesman said Monday, after another round of contract talks with a common front of unions representing the workers, that instituting the $100-a-week minimum would cost the government $475 million in the next year. Earlier government reports said such a move would cost Quebec $300 million a year.

He said the government's salary scale was on a par with similar jobs in the private sector and that Quebec would maintain its initial salary offer of 4.8 per cent annually in a three-year contract.

The common front wants 8.3 per cent a year.

Marcel Pepin, president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, one of the three labor federations in the common front, said after the day's bargaining session that Friday's strike would go ahead as planned.

WARNING GIVEN

Premier Robert Bourassa has warned that the government will take all necessary steps in the face of any general strike to protect the population.

The other two union groups in the common front are the Quebec Federation of Labor and the Quebec Teachers Corp.

Only a government change of heart might avert a mass walkout, Mr. Pepin said, adding that he told government negotiator Roch Bolduc to notify him at once if Quebec had any intention of modifying its position.

It was on this note that the fourth day of negotiations ended Monday, the CNTU president said.

While talks were under way here, Quebec hospitals were advised Monday to take emergency measures after a number of hospitals and other public services were hit by walkouts and slowdowns in preparation for Friday's strike.

ADVISE EVACUATION

A spokesman for the Quebec Hospital Association said 215 member hospitals have been advised to accept only emergency cases and to evacuate patients gradually.

He said a series of two-hour walkouts began without warning Monday morning and affected half the association's member institutions.

Non-medical employees, including orderlies, carpenters, electricians, and maintenance, laundry and kitchen workers, were involved in the walkouts.

Hydro-Quebec and some junior colleges in eastern Quebec were also affected by slowdowns. In Quebec City, several hundred teachers demonstrated before the offices of the Federation of Catholic School Commissions and in front of the motel where the negotiations are taking place.

Some 75 marchers carrying placards calmly walked into the negotiation chambers, peacefully walked around the room and left.

The leaders of the common front were authorized by their members in a province-wide vote March 9 to take any action they saw fit to settle the dispute.

The front represents employees of the government and other public institutions

Mr. Cournoyer, speaking in a radio interview, said the proposals had been presented two weeks ago to Quebec's major labor unions.

"They are before the cabinet now and I expect a decision soon," Mr. Cournoyer said.

The fines for illegal strikes "will be multiplied five times and in some cases 10 times" under the amendments, he added.

A government statement issued after negotiations began last Thursday said both sides agreed to concentrate on the salary question immediately.

The government bargaining team includes senior officials from the civil service, education and social affairs departments and representatives from school board, hospital and junior college federations.

After Monday's fourth day of bargaining, they were no closer to settlement.

Negotiating teams from individual job sectors will proceed with talks on issues related to their fields, the statement said.

Other issues to be dealt with at the joint table are job security, salary insurance and the government's pension plan offer.

The government bargaining team includes senior officials from the civil service, education and social affairs departments and representatives from school board, hospital and junior college federations.

The negotiations began early last year. The various contracts expired last June.

When representatives from both sides met March 30, 1971, to exchange opening statements on future negotiations at a brief meeting, Jean-Paul L'Allier, civil service minister, described the atmosphere as "positive."

Critics Continue Hammering Bill 3

By BRUCE YEMENIEN and PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

A government bill to restrict education spending and curtail teachers' salary increases was approved in principle in the legislature Monday amid opposition charges that it will hurt school children and create unemployment.

Bill 3, as the amendments to the Public Schools Act have come to be called, received second reading on a formal vote of 30 to 17 at the反对派 voted against the government.

The bill now moves to detailed study in committee.

Monday's debate marked the fourth time Premier Bennett brought Bill 3 before the house for second reading.

COSTS SPIRALLING

Education Minister Donald Brothers defended the bill in the beginning and at the end by saying that education costs are spiralling and that the public must be given a say in whether costs should continue to rise.

The bill would force school boards to get 60 per cent of ratepayers to approve any operating costs exceeding an amount set by the government.

It also limits teachers' annual salary increases to a figure set by the cabinet, not at 6.5 per cent. Any further increases must be approved by referendum.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said Bill 3's main re-visionary personnel in Campbell River who don't teach. Campbell said putting these people back into the classroom will lower the ratio of pupils to teachers.

He said this won't necessarily improve the quality of education and continued, charging that school boards are trying to evade their responsibilities of being accountable to the public.

"The average guy has the right to know why costs are going up," Campbell said.

Allan Williams (L — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said it is ironic to be debating the principle of a bill which is the "most unprincipled piece of legislation ever brought before this house as far as education is concerned."

Such legislation, he said, continues the government's consolidation of power over the school system under Premier Bennett's control.

He said the Dean S. F. N. Chant Royal Commission on Education in 1958 noted that school boards should retain autonomy in order to be able to respond to regional needs.

But under Bill 3, Williams said, "The school trustees are left with an empty role and an empty role is not going to attract local responsibility."

He charged Brothers has shown no leadership as minister, "only financial control designed to lead to mediocrity."

Williams said because of the defeat of a referendum in his constituency, 25 West Vancouver teachers will not be re-hired next fall.

NO SUPPORT

He said Brothers has told school boards that the bill doesn't prevent them from spending more money if they get voter approval and then has done everything he could to turn the voters against the referendum.

"Not once has he asked for the public to support school boards. It has been his consistent program to insist that education costs are going out of sight."

Summing up for the NDP, Williams again rejected the government's claims about a "taxpayers' revolt" and about spiralling education costs.

Low voter turnout for referendums, a steady relationship between teacher salaries and total education costs and between education spending and total personal income all disprove the government's arguments, he said.

Education spending has remained at 18 or 19 per cent of total personal income for a decade, Williams said.

Noting that kindergartens would be cut in North Vancouver because a referendum failed with a 57 per cent vote in favor, Williams said: "There's the minister — the kindergarten killer."

WINDMILL TILT

He said the government was engaging in a Don Quixote-type tilt by pretending to tackle the inflation problem — which he said can only be solved at the national level — by "spearheading the teachers — two per cent of the work force."

Ernie Hall (NDP-Surrey) said 40 teachers in his constituency are going to lose their jobs because of this bill.

"It's simply that the government doesn't want to spend more money on education because it has a low priority," Hall said.

He said he would vote against the bill "with pleasure" and would gladly make a political issue out of it in the next election.

Gordon Dowling (NDP-Burnaby-Edmonds) said Brothers has "made it impossible for teachers and trustees to function because of the bill," and Frank Calder (NDP-Aitlin) said fewer teachers are going to want to live in the north because they know they won't have a chance to earn a fair income."

Herb Bruch (SC-Esquimalt) warned that a 21-year-old teacher starting out

sult will be to hurt the children of the province, particularly those in rural districts.

Rural school boards "have been very conservative in developing new programs and their standards of education is below the norm. This bill will help keep them below the norm," Barrett said.

He charged Brothers with "deliberately setting out to influence public opinion against this bill."

"This is essentially a political bill using arguments of collective bargaining that affects the quality of the education of the children of this province."

He challenged Brothers to produce the research backing up the claim that continuing increases in education costs will provoke a financial crisis.

Lacking facts, Barrett said, the public has become confused and is being forced to make educational decisions in ignorance.

"It's cheap politics and I condemn it," Barrett said.

He pointed out that direct property taxes paid to education amount to one cent per person per day. He said people are being asked to vote on referendums affecting all their children, but not all people will be eligible to vote.

Some voters don't have school children while tenants with children won't be able to vote, Barrett said.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said the public is asking two questions about education today: can gross costs be kept from rising and are taxpayers getting the best value for their money?

He said there are 20 super-

SMOG CONTROL TO ADD $900 TO CAR PRICE

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The executive vice-president of General Motors Corp. said Monday that new-car prices may rise by nearly $900 by 1976, when new federally-required safety and smog control standards go into effect.

"This, of course, poses a very serious problem to all of the companies in the automotive industry," said Oscar Lundin.

"It's our task and our challenge to try to do the things the government is mandating at a lower cost and provide proper and appropriate benefits to the customers of our vehicles."

Lundin and Ernest S. Starkman, vice-president in charge of General Motors' environmental activities, told a news conference GM expected to spend at least $300 million this year for research and development of automotive emission controls and for reducing air and water pollution at its plants throughout the United States.

The company spent $237 million last year on pollution research, they said.

Starkman said Los Angeles County air pollution control district studies showed that hydrocarbon pollutants from automobiles had decreased by 36 per cent since a peak in 1966.

He said there was 25 per cent less carbon monoxide in the air than in 1966.

give public say

today at $8,000 a year would be making $128,000 a year by the age of 65 under a 6.5 per cent annual increase, not including increments for experience.

He also cited the Esquimalt and the Sooke-Jordan River areas as examples of districts where schools were "overbuilt" on the basis of the projected enrolment.

Resources Minister Ray Williston said school costs had continued rising at a high rate in spite of enrolments leveling off. He said the future of the education system depends on a sensible cost control program.

David Brousson (L-North Vancouver-Capilano) said the bill is discriminatory, creates turnstile in education and is based on a false premise that education costs are out of control.

He said Brothers had misled the house when he cited the rapid growth in the costs of education, health and welfare over the past few years and warned of a future spiral.

In fact, said Brousson, education costs had remained a constant 31 per cent or so of the provincial budget for the past 10 years while the other two sectors had increased their proportions.

These are the problems we are trying to correct by reducing school costs," he said.

Concluding the debate,

Brothers said he could only say that the opposition is not concerned that operating grants to school districts increased from $117 million in 1962 to $347 million in 1971.

In the same period, he said, teachers' salaries — which are part of the operating grants — increased from $78 million to $242 million.

Referring to Barrett's statement about one cent a day direct costs to the property owner, Brothers said that these costs would go up if any referendums are passed.

He also claimed that the finance formula will help rural school districts, but he did not elaborate.

Brothers said NDP and Liberal proposals to eliminate the property tax portion of education costs would mean that the public would not have a direct say in education.

He said this cannot be reconciled with their pleas to increase local control over education and rule whether placing the

Tax Money Being Used for Ads

To Push Bill 3, NDP Charges

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett charged Monday that Premier Bennett and Education Minister Donald Brothers are using tax money to subvert the legislature and influence public opinion on Bill 3.

As the legislature began the week's first sitting, Barrett rose on a point of privilege to complain about a government newspaper advertisement in the Vancouver Sun last Friday dealing with education.

The Speaker suggested the legislature get on with other business, and Bennett said he would Bill 3 for debate.

Barrett protested that the ad was a breach of legislative privilege.

Murray declined to adjourn, but he said he needed time to study Barrett's case. He ruled later in the afternoon that there was no precedent for allowing Barrett's arguments to stand.

The Speaker suggested the legislature get on with other business, and Bennett said he would Bill 3 for debate.

Barrett protested that the ad was immediately necessary because it could influence how the debate would proceed, and he said he regretted that Bennett was not being courteous enough to allow the Speaker to make a decision before Bill 3 was debated again.

Earlier, Alex Macdonald (NDP-Vancouver East) said that if the education issue had been before a court and an advertisement taken in a newspaper, "that would have been contempt of court punishable by fines or jail sentences."

He said Barrett had to do some manoeuvring to bring Bill 3 before the house, but he got his way and debate was nearly finished at 6 p.m. when Murray announced his decision.

He also claimed that the finance formula will help rural school districts, but he did not elaborate.

Brothers said he could only say that the opposition is not concerned that operating grants to school districts increased from $117 million in 1962 to $347 million in 1971.

In the same period, he said, teachers' salaries — which are part of the operating grants — increased from $78 million to $242 million.

Referring to Barrett's statement about one cent a day direct costs to the property owner, Brothers said that these costs would go up if any referendums are passed.

He also claimed that the finance formula will help rural school districts, but he did not elaborate.

'Dirty Mine Fined

EDMONTON (CP) — Cardinal River Coals Ltd. was fined $2,000 by provincial Judge Carl Rolf Monday for polluting Luscar Creek.

Judge Rolf, in his judgment after a trial earlier this month, said the firm showed "complete indifference" on the matter.

The coal company, which operates a strip-mining operation near the creek just east of Jasper National Park, was charged June 18, 1971, with allowing deleterious substances, such as coal dust and other suspended solids, to enter the creek, a stream with fish.

Judge Rolf reserved judgment after the Crown and defence counsel completed arguments March 2.

Crown counsel Bruce Patterson said the Crown had presented evidence substantiating the charges and that the defence's contention that human activity over the years had contributed to the degradation of the stream was "irrelevant."

Major Haul

INNISFAIL, Alta. (CP) — A 37-year-old elevator agent pleaded guilty Monday to the theft of 20,000 to 25,000 bushels of grain valued at $20,000.

Kenneth Johnston, agent for Federal Grains Ltd., at Penhold, Alta., was remanded until March 27 for sentencing on the charge of theft of over $50 between 1968 and October, 1971. The elevator where he was employed was destroyed by fire on Oct. 4, 1971. Shortages were uncovered by the RCMP when they investigated.

Joint Trial

CALGARY (CP) — A request for separate trials by 10 men jointly charged with non-capital murder were rejected Monday in Alberta Supreme Court.

The men, members of the Grim Reapers Motorcycle Club, are being tried for the slaying March 7, 1970, of Ronald George Hartley, the president of another club.

Drinking Charges

WINNIPEG (CP) — Lowering of Manitoba's age of majority to 18 from 21 in September, 1970, is cited as the cause of a slight increase in liquor offences in parts of Manitoba policed by the RCMP.

G. W. Mudge, assistant commissioner of the RCMP, said the lower age of majority has made liquor more available to juveniles 17 years of age and under who associated with 18-year-olds who now can obtain liquor legally.

Teachers' Offer

SASKATOON (CP) — Teachers, who may take a strike vote here Friday, have made a new offer between 7 and 8 per cent to trustees in an effort to end their dispute over a 1972 contract.

Further details of the offer were not released but a spokesman for the teachers' bargaining committee said Monday there is some dispute with trustees over the mechanics of calculating increment increases.

U Growth Slows

WINNIPEG (CP) — The era of rapid expansion and unlimited provincial support for universities is at an end, say the annual reports of the University of Manitoba and the University of Winnipeg.

The reports, tabled in the legislature Monday, point to a tapering-off in population increase and new forms of post-secondary education which absorb some of the provincial funds for education.

Dropout Clause

REGINA (CP) — A bill to allow cancellation of certain training course programs was introduced in the legislature Monday by Attorney-General Roy Romanow.

A contract could be cancelled without cost within four days after it is signed or if conditions in the act are not met by the person operating the course. The contract also can be cancelled before completion of the course if written notice is served within five years of the date the contract was signed.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

James Michael Smith, 19, of 1608 Quadra, was jailed for one year definite and one year indeterminate when he appeared in provincial court Monday on charges of theft and public mischief.

Smith originally had been ordered to appear for preliminary hearing on a dozen charges of mischief, theft and possession of stolen property. The Crown withdrew the other charges after Smith pleaded guilty to two of them.

Police said the accused was arrested Feb. 29 carrying tape equipment which has been stolen from a car parked in an underground parking facility on Quadra.

Entry to the car had been gained by slashing its convertible top. The tape equipment was valued at $28.

David Richard McAleer, 18, already serving a six-month jail term for auto theft, pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and theft of a $40 coin collection from a Milburn Drive Home.

He was ordered to serve an additional sentence of four months definite and four months indeterminate.

Robert B. McIntosh, 19, of no fixed address, was sentenced to four months definite and four months indeterminate at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre.

McIntosh admitted attempting to cash a forged cheque for $196.51 at The Bay March 11, while he was on probation from a jail term ordered for another offence.

Judge William Ostler delayed sentencing John Gus, 22, of Port Alberni, when he appeared in the morning session on a charge of attempting to cash someone else's cheque.

The judge asked Gus if he had any previous convictions and the accused replied, "Some, but not since last year."

Crown prosecutor John MacIntyre investigated at lunchtime, and when court resumed in the afternoon a lengthy record of trouble with the law was read, including jail terms for breaking and entering and auto theft.

It certainly looks like it (the accused's criminal record) was worth waiting for, MacIntyre said.

Ostler sentenced Gus to three months in jail.

Police said the accused had taken a $106.28 cheque from a home after an all-night drinking party and had tried to cash it at a taxi stand.

George Phillip Head, 19, was fined $250 for shoplifting a record from The Bay March 18. The accused had $100 on his person when he was arrested.

Katalina Vasko, 38, of 459 Beta, was given a suspended sentence and placed on six months' probation for shoplifting steaks and candy worth $6.39 from Safeway.

James Crawford, 40, address unknown, was fined a total of $140 on four charges of false pretences involving less than $50. He pleaded guilty to cashing four NSF cheques at a take-out restaurant, totalling $17.55.

Sandringham Talks Hinted By Chabot

Labor Minister James Chabot said Monday he will try to get both sides in the Sandringham Private Hospital strike together for negotiations.

Chabot made the comment after an hour-long meeting with six members of the Voice of Women and Victoria Social Action Committee.

The two groups have gathered more than 3,500 signatures to petitions calling on the government, "in the public interest and in the cause of justice," to require the parties to negotiate under terms of the Mediation Commission Act.

Most of the petitions were delivered to Chabot's office last week.

"I'm willing to meet the parties to pull them together and get them to talk," Chabot said.

"But I wouldn't try to influence either side."

He added that his move couldn't take place until after a final decision by the B.C. Labor Relations Board.

The board ruled earlier that Sandringham Private Hospital is not and has not bargained collectively. The ruling was sought by the Canadian Union of Public Employees, on strike since Sept. 30, 1970, for a first contract. The hospital is appealing the decision.

Asked if he is acting in response to the petitions, Chabot indicated the move to get both sides talking to each other was his own proposal.

There have been no negotiations since 28 employees, most of them nurse's aides, went on strike.

MLA 'Misled Legislature' —MacMillan

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Hemmingson, executive vice-president of natural resources for MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., says New Democratic Party MLA Bob Williams of Vancouver East has "misled the legislature" in remarks about plans of MacMillan Bloedel Properties Ltd.

Hemmingson said in a prepared statement Monday that Williams distorted the facts about the company's policy on land disposal.

Williams told the legislature last week that MacMillan Bloedel has a "property tax give-away" in its tree farm operations and wants to make money in a real estate "bonanza."

Hemmingson said that the rate of taxation is similar to the rate applied to any land. Assessment was related to value of the crop and recognized the passage of many years from seeding to growth.

Hemmingson also said if his company refused over the years to release property of this nature, Williams "would be the first to criticize us."

b.c. briefs

End Permissiveness

POWELL RIVER (CP) — Failure to enforce certain laws is an important factor in the rising incidence of crime, Provincial Judge Larry Eckhardt of Vancouver told the annual meeting of the Associated Chamber of Commerce of Vancouver Island.

He said parents and schools should be doing more to counteract permissiveness which he said is ever-growing in society.

Tests Too Costly

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two thousand of the 20,000 man-made chemicals coming onto the market each year should be tested for cancer-causing properties, a Vancouver panel on cancer research was told.

But Dr. H. F. Stich of the Cancer Research Centre at the University of British Columbia said such a screening operation would cost a whopping $80 million.

'More Dangerous'

KEREMEOS (CP) — Possessors of drugs are "more dangerous to the public than drunk drivers" although impaired drivers are potential murderers who could wipe out families, Provincial Judge J. A. Wisenden said after levying a $500 fine for possession of hashish.

He made the comment in an interview after fining Reginald John Keating of Kelowna, arrested while hitch-hiking through this South Okanagan village and charged after traces of hashish were found in a pipe he carried.

Walkout Ends

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Workers at the MacMillan Bloedel's Franklin River division began returning to their jobs on the regular shifts Monday night, ending a wildcat walkout.

Officials of the International Woodworkers of America ordered the men back to work following a meeting with company representatives.

About 350 men walked off the job Monday, complaining that the company was asking some workers to do two jobs.

One man was suspended for allegedly interfering with the operation of a yarding crew. The company said the suspension would be reviewed.

Hit-and-Run Victim Improving

By DOUG MacRAE
Times Staff

Slight improvement was reported today in the condition of Dale Coverdale, 19, who was found unconscious in a ditch on the Malahat almost four weeks ago and has been in a coma since then.

A hospital spokesman said Miss Coverdale, apparently the victim of a hit-and-run accident, is "opening and focusing her eyes occasionally," and is otherwise responding to persons around her.

"So long as there are no complications, we feel she will be all right," the spokesman said.

The woman was found by a motorist on the Shawnigan Lake cut-off the night of Feb. 23, two hours after she had left work at a teen-agers' clothing shop on Hillside.

RCMP discovered Miss Coverdale's car parked

two blocks from the store, but have come up with no explanation for her presence on the Shawnigan Lake Road. They have not been able to interview her.

She was last reported seen heading for the parking lot shortly after 9 p.m. store closing, carrying a purse, a loaf of bread and a book. All three items were found in the car, the door unlocked.

An RCMP officer said Miss Coverdale had acquaintances at Shawnigan Lake, but could find no indication that she had planned a trip there that night.

"It was obviously foul play," the officer said. "The hit and run was foul play."

"She was either taken to the road in another car, or taken in her own, which was later brought back to Victoria."

There was no evidence of sexual attack, and her multiple injuries were consistent with being struck by a car.

CHOKING FATAL

A 19-year-old Durrance Lake man was pronounced dead on arrival at Queen Victoria General Hospital this morning after he was brought in by high-speed police car.

The portion of the route northward along Interurban as far as Grange Road, which skirts Colquitz Creek, would cost $384,500 to place underground, Shrum said.

Saanich is involved in a costly beautification scheme for the creek, and has expressed concern at the damage which would be caused by the poles towering over it.

Council decided to take no further action on the letters, and to await developments.

Karl Wolfgang Ladwig, 3

Mark Lane Road, was found coughing and choking shortly after 8 a.m. by his parents, who tried to revive him with artificial respiration.

He was taken to hospital in escorts by Saanich and Victoria city cars.

An autopsy and coroner's

Home From the South, the Violet Green

WHEN OUR HOUSE WAS building, a carpenter sawed a round hole about two inches in diameter through the decking below the garage eaves. He may have done so in error, but I prefer to believe that he liked birds, and had winged tenants in mind.

Whatever his thinking, he provided an entryway for birds whose return we look forward to each spring. These are violet green swallows which winter in Mexico or even farther south, but return to the British Columbia coast around this time of year.

Sometimes, for reasons we can only guess at, their homecoming is delayed. Once we didn't catch the shadow of swift wings, or see the trim little shapes perched on a power wire, until April 15.

There was another spring when disaster struck. Its signs were bloodstains around the hole and feathers on the blacktop below. Since no cat could have got at the swallows, I suspected that the raider was a screech owl.

No violet greens showed up the following spring. For the next two years, the nesting space on the other side of the hole went unclaimed. A small matter, but it troubled us. We liked the swallows, and felt that the spring wasn't quite complete without them.

On April 2 last year, a fleeting shadow and a glimpse of an iridescent back signaled welcome news.

A pair of swallows — descendants, perhaps, of earlier nesters — was sizing up the ancestral abode. They stayed and raised a brood, and it was good on long, warm evenings to watch them chasing airborne insects in darting flight.

Had the broken chain been mended and a continuity restored? We didn't know, but we hoped that the swallows would return this year. If they did, in a spring slow to warm, we needn't expect them to arrive early.

We were starting breakfast on Monday when a shadow skinned along the drive.

"A swallow," Win said.

"They've come back."

"Too early," I told her.

"Anyway, it was a towhee. I saw it in the forsythia bush."

But another bird had dipped down to light on a lead-in wire. Its breast was silvery white, and in the sunlight its back glowed with a well-remembered sheen.

A second violet green whipped in to perch a foot or so from its mate. They didn't sit there long. But when I was getting into my car, I saw one of the pair checking out the hole under the eaves.

The swallows had not only returned: they had showed up on the first morning of official spring, two days earlier than any such homecoming we've noted in the past.

We're glad to have them. Like flowering tree, and grass that could stand cutting, their presence helps round out the brave new season.

As a veteran of more than one little red school house, and miserable holes they were, I was introduced to the open area concept of education at an early age. This particular school boasted about 40 students in various stages of learning, and one room in which to teach them.

Clarkson called for an independent body being established to review welfare rates so the "public knows how much welfare recipients have to live off of."

He said that woman and children should also be categorized into definite unemployable so that they can be given a better rate.

Rent Hike Scheduled For Forces

By PAT DUFOUR

Times Staff

New rental charges for armed forces' married quarters come into effect April 1, affecting more than 600 service families in this area.

Formerly based on a man's pay and the accommodation provided, the charges will now be mainly influenced by the market rental value of the areas in which they're located.

The readjustment in charges are based on a survey carried out by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

It appears that castles do nothing to increase the value of nearby real estate. The 29 married quarters at Royal Roads, with its impressive castle, former home of the Dunsmiss, have the lowest rental rates of all service homes in the area.

They rent for $2 less than those at Belmont, $5 less than those at Rocky Point and $10 less than married quarters at Work Point and Signal Hill.

At Belmont, occupiers of 256 units will receive increases in rental charges, 187 decreases, and the price of eight other units will remain the same. Present charges range from $100 to $160.

Men and their families living in quarters at Work Point and Signal Hill now pay anywhere from $106 to $168. Seventy-five of these will now have increases ranging from $2 to $24, 55 decreases of $1 to $18.

Officers Charged

Officers at Work Point and Signal Hill now are charged rents ranging from $121 to $226 with the average three-bedroom home costing $183.

Sixty-two of these will now have increased charges of $1 to $30, five decreases of between $5 to $11.

Rocky Point married quarters now rent from $118 to $166. Rents for all 17 homes will be increased anywhere from $1 to $28.

Rental charges for Royal Roads' married quarters are not available with the exception for the commandant's home. Listed under the "special houses" category it will now cost the occupant $311 a month.

The other three homes in this category will also cost more to inhabit.

Admiral's House in CFB Dockyard will now cost $406 a month, a rise of $20; the commodore's official residence will be hiked from $306 to $321, and the commanding officer of the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, will now have to pay $281 instead of $276.

Admiral's House, the highest-priced residential real estate, is no bargain, according to one armed forces' spokesman.

Dust Flies

"It was built at the turn of the century," he says, "and every time you close a door the dust flies out of the baseboards."

He says the new rates will remedy a situation that exists where married quarters are located in depressed areas.

"Take a place like Greenwood, Nova Scotia," he explains. "There, married quarters were costing much more than places outside the base. They couldn't get anyone to take them."

The new regulations set ceilings on the amount of increase that can be levied, based on rank. Sergeants and below can't have a bigger hike than $15; warrant officers, master warrant officers, and chief warrant officers, $17; officer cadets, second lieutenants and lieutenants, $15; captains, $17; majors, $20; lieutenants-colonels, $25; colonels, $30, and brigadier-generals and above, $35.

More than 300 service families living in married quarters here face rental increases, beginning April 1.

The have one advantage, however, over their "civvies" street" neighbors.

Increased charges for water and other utilities pose no problem for them — utilities come gratis when you live on base.

Vickie Marcou and Simon Tweddle relax in commune

Garbage Pickers' Pad Collector's Paradise

TORONTO (CP) — Survival for the unemployed in a big city can be harrowing at the best of times, but a group of young people living together in an old house here have found one way of coping with their most immediate financial needs and mental anguish.

They rummage through garbage and pick out items they find useful.

Walking around and looking through garbage is relaxing, says Leonard Carr, in his early 20s. It keeps your mind off the fact that you are not working.

He and Simon Tweddle, also in his early 20s, usually ram the back alleys and streets surrounding their midtown house collecting other people's castoffs. Both are unemployed and work at odd jobs periodically, but neither has worked long enough recently to qualify for unemployment insurance.

And both say they are too proud to accept welfare.

Their house rents for $400 a month. All household expenses are shared by eight main residents. Three of them students at the Ontario College of Art, have set finances and are able to pay their share of expenses on time every month. But for the rest of them, it's left to chance, and garbage collecting. They are two months behind in the rent now, but the rest of the bills are paid.

Food usually runs about $30 a week for one main meal a day ranging from spaghetti or macaroni to hamburger or other inexpensive meat and lots of bread and potatoes.

Lack of Vitamin C is a problem at times. Simon, who has a degree in English drama but can't find a job, had bleeding gums recently.

"That's one of the first signs of scurvy," he said in an interview. "That sure doesn't make me feel good."

All the furniture in the house, with the exception of a $2 couch, was thrown out by somebody. Old mattresses are strewn about the floor or on boxes, and discarded sections of carpeting covers some floors.

Even the light bulb hanging in the living room is a castoff and it has been "working for ages," says one resident.

'Greed Will Take Them Off Welfare'

By ANN DUNSMUIR

Times Staff

• Greed.

That's a key word to Phil Gagliardi.

Greed is what will get people off the welfare rolls he told Victoria Credit Women at a breakfast meeting today.

Touching on the tried and true. Sacred hetero noires, the minister of rehabilitation and social improvement gave his audience "the word" on teachers, welfare deadbeats, schools, psychiatrists and "cotton pickin' professors."

Gagliardi said his department's incentive program which allows welfare recipients to earn up to $10 a month without loss of welfare is successful because it utilizes human greed to get people off social assistance.

Gagliardi referred to "criticism of the proposed amendments to the Social Assistance Act which places the responsibility for social assistance payments "in the absolute discretion of the minister."

The amendments resulted from a case heard last November when a Vancouver mother of six (Mrs. Toni Colwhish) sought a court order to enforce payment of increased social assistance rates which a review board had recommended in her case.

The minister says schools today are not training students for the role they "should be playing in society."

The minister described his appointment as welfare chief as being "saddled with a responsibility that was foreign to my nature."

"They want more than $100. Soon they're earning $200 or $300 and are off social assistance. They find they enjoy associating with nice people and get their dignity back."

Gagliardi described society today as being composed of a great many dissatisfied people.

"Manpower can't get near us. We don't have sophisticated psychiatrists or head shrinks in our organization. We just have ordinary people

"Nobody seems satisfied with what God gave them."

Gagliardi says the government's aim is to look after the needs of "ordinary people."

"Today we're having a battle with our teachers because we fixed their raises at 6.5 per cent," he said.

Gagliardi denounced teachers' claims that they are being singled out for special treatment as a "lot of hooey."

"If they want more money let them go to the people who pay the bills — the taxpayers," he said.

The minister says schools today are not training students for the role they "should be playing in society."

The educational system needs a real overhaul. Students receive a fine academic education but can't fill jobs in society."

Find Jobs

Gagliardi says his Alliance of Businessmen is more successful at finding jobs than Canada Manpower.

"Manpower can't get near us. We don't have sophisticated psychiatrists or head shrinks in our organization. We just have ordinary people dealing with ordinary people."

Gagliardi referred to "criticism of the proposed amendments to the Social Assistance Act which places the responsibility for social assistance payments "in the absolute discretion of the minister."

The amendments resulted from a case heard last November when a Vancouver mother of six (Mrs. Toni Colwhish) sought a court order to enforce payment of increased social assistance rates which a review board had recommended in her case.

Order Refused

The judge refused to make such an order but asked the attorney-general's department to establish guidelines.

"You hear I'm a dictator. That's a lot of hooey. The government has the power, not the minister."

He said the Cowlishaw case had "all been stirred up by an American law professor at Simon Fraser University."

"I'd like to tell those cotton pickin' professors to run their universities and leave me alone. Some of those professors need to be told where to head in," Gagliardi said.

Mental illness growing problem.

'Merciless, Unfriendly Sweden'

By STEPHEN CROALL

Special to the Times

STOCKHOLM — A psychiatric report which constitutes the first systematic attempt to diagnose Sweden's welfare state in terms of mental rather than economic, health, paints a gloomy picture of a merciless, unfriendly society.

The Swedish man is under constant pressure to maintain his status and "do his duty." The Swedish woman tries desperately to live up to demands that she be both emancipated and domesticated. The early joy and curiosity of Swedish children are swiftly crushed by the coldness and rebukes of their elders, according to the report.

It points to the "vicious circle" in which a high rate of economic growth is necessary to pay the cost of looking after those who cannot "keep up," but as their number steadily increases a higher growth rate is needed, which only results in more people being unable to keep up — and so on.

The conclusion to be drawn from the report is that a country's welfare can no longer be measured simply by its "standard of life," and that Swedes are increasingly sacrificing their mental health for improvements in their material environment.

The report, commissioned by the national social welfare authorities, who have been instructed by parliament to investigate the rapidly growing problem of mental ill health, notes that the dilemma is not solely a Swedish one — it is reflected throughout the western world.

The report, entitled Mental Health and the Human Environment, is the first of a series written by Dr. Hans Lohman, who is attached to the social welfare board and is considered Sweden's top expert on psychiatry and socio-medicine.

A compendium of literature on the subject and his own findings, the report is considered a first step towards the establissement of a national institute of mental health demanded by several members of parliament.

Swedes sacrifice mental health for material prosperity: Report.

Parliament's decision to investigate the situation was taken against a background of spiralling mental care costs and a critical shortage of qualified psychiatrists.

The latest available figures show that the number of patients admitted to mental institutions rose from 73,000 in 1968 to 83,000 in 1970, at a daily cost per patient of more than $21. A still greater number of outpatients were given "light psychiatric care" at public hospitals, while the enormous number who took to alcohol or drugs as a "way out" are not included in these statistics.

Until as late as 10 years ago, experts say, psychiatry was regarded in Sweden as somewhat dubious science and this is reflected in the lack of qualified practitioners today. The social welfare board admits that many posts are unfilled and that it has been obliged to fill some with candidates who are technically incompetent.

Dr. Lohman says the problem is basically one of an increasingly hard and regulated society in which the citizens must maintain production and performance or be rejected as someone no longer usable.

Cancer Experts Qualify Answers

By JEFF CARRUTHERS

Special to the Times

TORONTO — Do viruses really cause cancers?

Can a breast-fed baby receive cancer-causing virus particles from his or her mother?

Is cancer pre-programmed in human cells, just waiting to be set loose by some external factor?

Can owners of pet mice and cats receive cancer viruses from their pets?

Run Risk

And do laboratory workers who use their own cells for test-tube malignancy experiments run a risk of catching the malignancy themselves?

These were some questions raised by Canadian cancer experts during a recent two-day cancer seminar here for science writers, sponsored by the Canadian Cancer Society.

And the answers the scientists gave? In most cases, a "yes ... but."

Dr. Rose Sheinin, of the division of biological research at the Ontario Cancer Institute, said there are 138 known cancer viruses among animals, most among mammals. Some of these are suspected to be involved in human cancers.

But Dr. Sheinin stressed there is no such thing as "the cancer virus." A virus only becomes a cancer-causing virus if it can somehow alter genetic material to produce a cancer cell.

In other words, viruses alone are not enough to cause cancers. Dr. Sheinin and other scientists believe there is a need for a triggering event. Radiation is a well-known factor in cancers and may be just a trigger. Certain chemicals may be triggers.

Extensive laboratory animal tests have suggested that animals, man included, are exposed to potential cancer-causing viruses every day. Yet only some animals actually develop cancer.

Man, according to Dr. H. F. Stich, of the University of British Columbia, is routinely exposed to leukemia viruses through association with pet cats and rodents, which carry the virus, and often through eating chicken, infected with a leukemia-like disease.

Dr. Stich told reporters he is personally very concerned about the dangers of cat, rat and mice owners contracting cancer viruses and then developing cancer.

But other cancer experts at the seminar were quick to point out that there has been no evidence to date that in fact cancer viruses are passed to humans as a result of contact with pets, let alone that cancer has in fact ever developed.

Now Tested

Dr. Stich acknowledged this fact and noted that pet owners can now be tested to see if they have picked up new cat leukemia viruses, for example.

One popular theory related to this "constant exposure" concept suggests that the body's natural defences are meeting challenges from potential cancers every day. Only when such defences break down, especially as one ages, do cancers have a chance to develop and spread.

A more disconcerting theory discussed during the seminar postulates that the genetic record of every cell in all vertebrate animals (including man) contains the necessary instructions to produce cancer-causing viruses and to trigger a cancer-causing event.

In normal cells, this cancer pre-programming is controlled by a genetic factor. But such cancer inducers as radiation can break the control and lead to an internally-created cancer, the theory suggests.

Dr. A. A. Axelrad, of the University of Toronto, explained that if this theory turns out to be true, then it would mean that viruses can be produced internally by cells. This in turn would make external viral infections less important in some, possibly all, cancers. And it would make vaccines less promising for controlling such cancers.

In the case of breast-feeding, Dr. Sheinin admitted there is evidence that virus particles can be passed from women with breast cancer to their infants through the mother's milk.

Again, other scientists said there is no evidence this has ever happened. But they admitted that viruses and tissue cultures involving viruses must be treated with extra care, just in case.

MOD MARRIEDS LIVING IN SIN

LONDON (AP) — Many young English couples are faking living in sin.

Secretly they've done the one thing not permitted by their permissive friends.

They've got married.

Free love has so much more status than marriage among the permissive set that when couples really do want to wed, many have to do it furtively.

Then they fake the living in sin.

It's because they're too ashamed to tell their friends, says Stanley Jepson, an English marriage licence registrar.

"They are afraid of being thought old-fashioned," he said in a recent interview.

Couples are told that marriage is finished and that to get married is no longer "with it."

They don't realize that their friends are probably in the same boat.

Far from becoming unpopular, marriage is on the increase."

New Controls Limit Hazard of Chemicals

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has announced new controls to limit human exposure to the DDT-like family of chemicals known as PCBs.

The agency said that it could not remove toxic industrial chemicals from the environment, but that it was taking the steps it could to keep them out of food.

PCBs in high concentrations are a known and serious health hazard. The effect of low level, long-term human exposure is unknown, but studies on birds and animals raise the possibility of genetic defects.

"We do not believe that current food levels present a hazard to public health," FDA Commissioner Charles C. Edwards said.

"We do believe, however, that the sources of PCBs in food can and should be significantly reduced to prevent any potential hazard from developing."

End Use of PCBs

The controls would:

—End the use of PCBs in plants that process food, animal feed or food packaging materials.

—Ban the use of recycled paper products containing PCBs for food packaging.

—Set temporary levels of PCB residues in food packing materials and in dairy and poultry products, fish, infant foods, and animal feed.

PCBs are a family of odorless and colorless, man-made industrial chemicals — polychlorinated biphenyls — that have been widely used for the past 40 years as electrical-insulating fluids, heat-transfer fluids, and in inks, paints, lubricants, plastics and carbonless carbon paper.

The properties that have made them valuable to industry — they can withstand high heat and are highly stable — have made them an environmental hazard. Like DDT, they are fat-soluble and work their way up the food chain until they reach man.

Feed Contaminated

Within the past year, there have been at least four incidents of PCB contamination of poultry feed. Hundreds of thousands of chickens and turkeys and hundreds of thousands of crates of eggs were taken off the market and destroyed. In one of the incidents, PCBs got into the feed from a leaking heat-transfer unit.

The chemical has been found in a variety of packaged food. This was traced to use of recycled paper in the packaging but Edwards said that PCBs now have also been found in virgin paper stocks.

PCBs were in 67 per cent of food packaging that FDA tested and in 19 per cent of the food in those packages. The survey also showed that 75 per cent of packaged infant cereal samples contained PCBs.

They also were found in fresh water fish and in some food animals. Edwards attributed this part to environmental contamination from the discharge of PCB waste effluents into water and air.

FDA said that it is impossible to eliminate PCBs totally from food because of their prevalence in the environment.

Double Tax Hazard

Double taxation is a hazard under the amended B.C. Succession Duty Act, estate planners were told at a luncheon meeting today.

Consultants D. C. Selman and R. W. McCloy, of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co., delivered a dialogue on death duties and gift tax to the Estate Planning Council of Victoria, at Strathcona Hotel.

Selman said a change in the estate tax-base is one of the most important differences and has had the least exposure.

This is the change that would make the passing of real and personal property from outside the province to a person resident here subject to duty in both places, unless the property in question was situated in a "co-operating province."

DOUBLE DUTY

Heirs to property in England, for example, will find duty charged on the estate by British authorities, and by the B.C. government as well. Selman said.

If people move residence to Alberta — a tax shelter province — in order to avoid or reduce death duty, they could find they have not avoided tax if their property passes to a B.C. resident.

But although a B.C. person paying succession duties will be credited for this tax under the Income Tax Act or the Gift Tax Act of B.C., it appears no credit will be given for gift tax paid in another province, Selman said.

He also pointed out that while B.C. had increased the exemption on property passing to spouses from $60,000 to $159,000, the rates of taxation remain unchanged and the requirement that only gifts made within three years of death may be taxed stands as before.

By comparison, Ontario has raised the exemption for spouse-beneficiaries to $300,000, including all gifts made within 15 years of death, and has doubled the rate.

SALES FORCED

McCloy noted the government appears to be moving to counter the argument that tax policies force the sale of family business and farms.

A basic point about the gift tax is the fact that it will be retroactive to Jan. 1 of this year.

Whether or not the donor lives in B.C., but gives real or personal property situated in B.C., he is liable for tax, Selman said.

CHAMBER MUSIC on intermittent-Sunday afternoons has enhanced the pleasures of a visit to Greater Victoria Art Gallery through the winter. Last Sunday the Conservatory of Music Chamber Orchestra conducted by Sydney Humphreys, played for a number of appreciative listeners.

Standing is soprano Erika Kurth who sang Mozart's Exultate Jubilate with the orchestra as well as an aria from the composer's opera, The Abduction from the Seraglio. Also on the program was a Handel Concerto.

VOTERS GET WARD QUESTION

Voters will decide how they want to elect their trustees each year.

The Greater Victoria School Board supported a proposal that, along with the December trustee elections this year, a plebiscite will be held for voters to indicate whether they favor an at-large system of elections or a ward system.

The December vote will be run on the present at-large system and any change indicated by voters would come into effect in 1973.

Trustee Peter Bunn said that since the school board was having so much trouble deciding which kind of system it preferred, it is good policy to seek the help of the electorate on the issue.

Bunn said the at-large system produces good trustees and this year has produced some of the best debate of his

10 years on the board but that a plebiscite would be good to settle the "on-again, off-again" issue.

Harry Graham said if the same percentage of voters turns out in December as they have in the past, the wishes of the so-called silent majority will not be heard.

"That's too bad," said trustee Dr. Carron Jameson.

It was not until October of last year, after commitments had been made by school boards, that Brothers announced its intention to cut back on the spending limit from 110 per cent of the basic education program to 108 per cent.

"We shouldn't have to run for cover every time the minister gets up to make a

Newfie Campaign Heats Up

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Progressive Conservative Premier Frank Moores and Liberal Opposition Leader Edward Roberts will sweep through rural Newfoundland today as the campaign for Friday's provincial election gathers momentum.

The two major party leaders plan to campaign in areas where their parties suffered defeats in the Oct. 28 election — Mr. Moores in Bay de Verde and Mr. Roberts in Grand Falls.

The Liberals, who lost the October election by the narrowest of margins, won the Bay de Verde seat that time by 21 votes. The Conservatives in the village of Sally's Cove inadvertently burned 105 ballots. The Supreme Court upheld the Conservative victory in the riding.

Later in the campaign, Mr. Moores will visit Harbour

Party one. However, resignations and defections brought party standings in the legislature to 20 PCs and 30 Liberals by the time the house was dissolved for this election.

CONSIDERED IMPORTANT

The two leaders attach much importance to those ridings where the running was close in October. For instance, both Mr. Mr. Moores and Mr. Roberts plan to be in thinly-populated St. Barbe South later this week.

This seat was won by the Conservatives by only eight votes last October, with a complete recount impossible because a returning officer in the village of Sally's Cove inadvertently burned 105 ballots. The Supreme Court upheld the Conservative victory in the riding.

About 265,690 voters are registered for Friday's election.

Over $400,000 Cut From School Budget

Greater Victoria school trustees took the big plunge Monday night as they finally cut their 1972 budget.

After months of debate and countless revisions of spending totals by the district administration, the school board cut out $42,000 from the 1972 provisional operating budget and passed along the new budget to the department of education for approval.

An appeal by the school board to taxpayers for extra money resulted in a resounding defeat in a referendum March 11. Less than one-third of the voters supported the referendum.

The cut brings the board's budget within the allowable spending limit of 108 per cent of the basic education program, a figure set by the department of education. The increase over 1971 spending is 5.61 per cent.

BROTHERS CHIDED

In sending the budget along to the department, the board got a kick in the Education Minister Donald Brothers for leaving so late his decision to cut back on educational spending this year.

It was not until October of last year, after commitments had been made by school boards, that Brothers announced his intention to cut back on the spending limit from 110 per cent of the basic education program to 108 per cent.

"We shouldn't have to run for cover every time the minister gets up to make a

Special Meet To Decide Fate Of Gas Station

Oak Bay council will call a special meeting to debate whether or not a service station should be permitted in the complex proposed by developer John Mace for the controversial Windsor block adjacent to Windsor Park.

At Monday's council meeting Mace produced a new set of plans for the block bounded by Goodwin, Currie, Newport and Windsor. The new plans call for a U-shaped building, six stories on Goodwin, going from five to finally four storeys on Newport.

Also included in the plans is a service station, owned by Texaco Canada Ltd., on the corner of Windsor and Newport and a two-storey medical-dental building fronting on Currie.

McLELLAND OPPOSED

Ald. Douglas McLelland said he was opposed to the plan on two counts — the gas station and the proposed density which he considered too high, particularly on Goodwin.

Originally Mace had wanted to build the two nine-storey towers on the site. This was roundly defeated after a stormy public hearing that brought out the largest crowd of protesters in Oak Bay's history.

McLelland said Monday that council had won a lengthy legal battle to prevent a gas station being put in on the corner.

He quoted from the judge's findings that council had been right to restrict zoning on that corner to retail. The judge ruled that council had acted "in good faith and in the interests generally of the area" McLelland reminded members.

Mace said that Texaco was not prepared to sell its property for any other use.

He added, "I feel that a service station is a service on that corner. They're bigger than we are and have very strong feelings of principle involved."

Pay Hike Jumps Opening Hurdle

Oak Bay council passed the first three readings of a bylaw Monday that will increase aldermen's pay by 33 1/3 per cent and the mayor's salary by $900.

The bylaw will increase aldermen's pay from $1,800 to $2,400 and Mayor Frances Elford's salary from $5,400 to $6,300.

Only one alderman opposed the increase.

Ald. Douglas McLelland said he could not support the increase because of its emotional impact and the position in which it would place council when it came to wage negotiations with municipal staff.

McLelland said it would also be "difficult to preach to poor people" if council voted themselves the increase.

He referred particularly to a letter from E. Rejal, 2661 Estevan, dealt with by council earlier in the meeting.

In his letter, Rejal pointed out the problems of old-age pensioners. Rejal asked for means by which elderly people could hold on to their homes for which they had worked and saved all their lives without losing their dignity.

On considering the letter, council had moved that letters be written Prime Minister Trudeau, Premier Bennett and local members of Parliament asking for action.

In moving the pay increase, Ald. Brian Smith said that while he was not interested in it for himself and he knew the increase would not be met with "resounding popularity," he felt that $2,400 was a mod-

Oak Bay to Protest Zoning Vote Change

Oak Bay council will write to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell opposing a proposed amendment to the Municipal Act which would reduce the required majority for a zoning bylaw vote from two-thirds to a straight majority.

Ald. Brian Smith said Monday the proposed legislation was an "erosion of protection" and that he had been shocked when he heard about the change.

He said he had talked to the minister but results would only be achieved if there was an outcry from municipalities

He told council that a ramp leading down to the under-parking area was on 15 feet of Texaco property.

Ald. Shirley Dowell asked if the complex could be built without using Texaco property for the ramp and was told by Mace's Vancouver architect that the result would be second-rate apartments.

Mace told council the Texaco site is now "a mud-hole" and if not included in the complex could remain for as long as 100 years.

McLelland said he could not see why Mace considered the Texaco property such a "high risk corner" because there were three other properties remaining on the block that were not included in Mace's land acquisition and these could also change over the years.

McLelland contended that council must decide in principle whether a gas station should be allowed on the corner.

STATION OPPOSED

Also received at Monday's meeting was a letter from the Windsor Park Neighborhood Group opposing the gas station. In the letter the group asked council if, after fighting and winning a court battle to keep the gas station out, would it still oppose it.

They asked council members to speak at their next meeting, to be held 7:30 p.m. Thursday, April 6 in the Windsor Park pavilion.

A letter from the Oak Bay Board of Trade asked council to use caution in considering the Mace project.

The letter said the board was well aware of the need for redevelopment of the block but "the prime interests to be served in this area are those of the residents of the area as well as the few commercial enterprises, rather than any specific group or groups wishing to develop the area to a maximum as a means of inflating their profits."

ATHENS — The Greek Junta fired its crown regent today and named Premier George Papadopoulos to replace him while retaining the premiership.

Papadopoulos, Greece's strongman since the coup of April, 1967, took over the royal powers of self-exiled King Constantine from Gen. George Zottakis. This gives Papadopoulos the two top offices in the country. The government said Zottakis was dismissed after he refused to approve a law, drafted by the cabinet in January, to increase the security forces, including the number of persons in the country's fire department.

SALISBURY — Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith's son, Alexander Douglas Smith, 22, has pleaded guilty to a charge of illegally possessing or acquiring marijuana. He was alleged to have had about eight ounces of the drug on him when he was searched at a border post with Mozambique, about 125 miles northeast of Salisbury, last Dec. 20.

New York — Patrolman William Phillips has been indicted for two 1968 murders, five months after he told the Knapp commission that practically every policeman in the city was getting graft.

Phillips, 40, a 14-year police veteran, was accused of killing a man and a girl and wounding another man in an East Side bordello on Christmas Eve, 1968. Phillips pleaded not guilty at his arraignment and was ordered held in $50,000 bail, which his lawyer, F. Lee Bailey, said would be Asked if he thought his client has been framed because of his Knapp commission testimony, Bailey replied: "It's been done before."

YUBA CITY, Calif. — A judge has ruled that Juan Corona is not entitled to bail pending his trial on charges of murdering 25 men. The lawyer for the 38-year-old farm labor contractor had sought bail for Corona after the California Supreme Court ruled that the death penalty violated the state constitution, arguing that the law prohibiting bail for persons charged with capital crimes was no longer applicable. Superior Court Judge Richard Patton denied the bail, citing another California Supreme Court decision that bail still should be denied to individuals charged with what were capital crimes if "proof of guilt is evident or the presumption thereof is great."

PHOENIX, Ariz. — City manager John Wentz drafted a memo instructing city department heads on the art of writing a brief, one-page memo. Wentz' memo was six pages long.

YORK, England — Magistrates found Eileen Downs guilty of stealing her boyfriend's $234 toupes and flushing it down her toilet. They released her with a warning not to do it again. Miss Down, 37, told the court she grabbed David Rhodes' wig during a row and flushed it down the toilet "because it was my way of stopping him from getting violent with me." She said Rhodes did calm down.

YOKOHAMA, Japan — Urging the 18 other members of the town assembly to support his candidacy for mayor, Tomo Jodai said he was "earnest and determined enough to stake my life." Then he whipped out a four-inch knife, put his left hand on a table and cut off his little finger.

"This is to prove my intentions are honorable and I stand by them as a man," said Jodai, who is 55 and the chief of a fishery co-operative.

He was taken to hospital and was reported in satisfactory condition today.

PARIS (Reuter) — A leading French newspaper today published an interview Tuesday with a former French trooper in the Waffen SS who claimed he saw Hitler's deputy Martin Bormann dying near a shell-blasted tank in May, 1945.

He added that he had closed Bormann's eyes himself.

The daily Le Figaro, considered one of the most serious newspapers in France, said it had no other proof than what the interviewed man said himself. But it added that it had checked and found the man had told the story for many years before claims were made that Bormann was alive in South America.

When I leaned over him his eyes were open and he had a glazed stare. I closed his eyes and left running. There were no other witnesses."

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The deal presented today was a favorite of the late Alvin Landy, former executive secretary of the American Contract Bridge League. The hand arose in the 1950 National Men's Team-of-Four Championship. Landy was sitting South. The deal serves to illustrate how important an overtrick can be in tournament (duplicate) bridge. Landy, incidentally, holds the A.C.B.L. record for the number of wins in the National Men's Team-of-Four Championship. His four victories in 1947, 1948, 1954, and 1958, have never been equalled — and, according to the experts, probably will never be surpassed.

East-West vulnerable.
South deals.

Rent Hike Scheduled For Forces

By PAT DUFOUR

Times Staff

New rental charges for armed forces' married quarters come into effect April 1, affecting more than 600 service families in this area.

Formerly based on a man's pay and the accommodation provided, the charges will now be mainly influenced by the market rental value of the areas in which they're located.

The readjustment in charges are based on a survey carried out by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

It appears that castles do nothing to increase the value of nearby real estate. The 29 married quarters at Royal Roads with its impressive Castle, former home of the Dunsmonds, have the lowest rental rates of all service homes in the area.

They rent for $2 less than those at Belmont, $5 less than those at Rocky Point and $10 less than married quarters at Work Point and Signal Hill.

At Belmont, occupiers of 256 units will receive increases in rental charges. 187 decreases, and the price of eight other units will remain the same. Present charges range from $100 to $160.

Men and their families living in quarters at Work Point and Signal Hill now pay anywhere from $106 to $168. Seventy-five of these will now have increases ranging from $2 to $24, 55 decreases of $1 to $18.

Officers Charged

Officers at Work Point and Signal Hill now are charged rents ranging from $121 to $226 with the average three-bedroom home costing $183.

Sixty-two of these will now have increased charges of $1 to $30, five decreases of between $5 to $11.

Rocky Point married quarters now rent from $118 to $166. Rents for all 17 homes will be increased anywhere from $1 to $28.

Rental charges for Royal Roads' married quarters are not available with the exception for the commandant's

Vickie Marcou and Simon Tweddle relax in commune

Garbage Pickers' Pad Collector's Paradise

TORONTO (CP) — Survival for the unemployed in a big city can be harrowing at the best of times, but a group of young people living together in an old house here have found one way of coping with their most immediate financial needs and mental anguish.

They rummage through garbage and pick out items they find useful.

Walking around and looking through garbage is relaxing, says Leonard Carr, in his early 20s. It keeps your mind off the fact that you are not working.

He and Simon Tweddle, also in his early 20s, usually roam the back alleys and streets surrounding their midtown house collecting other people's castoffs. Both are unemployed and work at odd jobs periodically, but neither has worked long enough recently to qualify for unemployment insurance.

And both say they are too proud to accept welfare.

Their house rents for $400 a month. All household expenses are shared by eight main residents. Three of them students at the Ontario College of Art, have set finances and are able to pay their share of expenses on time every month. But for the rest of them, it's left to chance, and garbage collecting. They are two months behind in the rent now, but the rest of the bills are paid.

Food usually runs about $30 a week for one main meal a day ranging from spaghetti or macaroni to hamburger or other inexpensive meat and lots of bread and potatoes. Lack of Vitamin C is a problem at times. Simon, who has a degree in English drama but can't find a job, had bleeding gums recently.

"That's one of the first signs of scurvy," he said in an interview. "That sure doesn't make me feel good."

All the furniture in the house, with the exception of a $2 couch, was thrown out by somebody. Old mattresses are strewn about the floor or on boxes, and discarded sections of carpeting covers some floors.

Even the light bulb hanging in the living room is a castoff and it has been "working for ages," says one resident.

One in 10 Canadians has some form of cardiovascular ailment, a disorder of the heart and blood vessels. Even more alarming, cardiovascular diseases cause more than half of all deaths in Canada. About one-third of these occur to people in the 45-64 years age group.

However, the picture is not all dark. Many heart defects can be repaired and most people recover from their first heart attack.

Your Heart, a 20-page booklet, describes how your heart works and discusses various kinds of heart diseases, including atherosclerosis, high blood pressure and angina pectoris. It also tells you about warning signals and what you can do to prevent heart trouble.

If you are concerned about your heart, consult your physician. He is best qualified to answer all your questions during your regular check-up.

For a free copy of this very important booklet contact your provincial Heart Foundation. The address is in your telephone book.

'Greed Will Take Them Off Welfare'

By ANN DUNSMUIR

Times Staff

Greed.

That's a key word to Phil Gagliardi.

Greed is what will get people off the welfare rolls he told Victoria Credit Women at a breakfast meeting today.

Touching on the tried and true Sacred Beets Noire, the minister of rehabilitation and social improvement gave his audience "the word" on teachers, welfare deadbeats, schools, psychiatrists, and "cotton pickin' professors."

Gagliardi said his department's incentive program which allows welfare recipients to earn up to $100 a month without loss of welfare is successful because it utilizes human greed to get people off social assistance.

"They want more than $100. Soon they're earning $200 or $300 and are off social assistance. They find they enjoy associating with nice people and get their dignity back."

Pull Weight

"I did call people on welfare deadbeats and I meant what I said because everyone who is going to be dignified is someone who is pulling his own weight."

The minister described his appointment as welfare chief as being "saddled with a responsibility that was foreign to my nature."

Gagliardi described society today as being composed of a great many dissatisfied people.

Gagliardi referred to criticism of the proposed amendments to the Social Assistance Act which places the responsibility for social assistance payments "in the absolute discretion of the minister."

The amendments resulted from a case heard last November when a Vancouver mother of six (Mrs. Toni Cowlishaw) sought a court order to enforce payment of increased social assistance rates which a review board had recommended in her case.

Order Refused

The judge refused to make such an order but asked the attorney-general's department to establish guidelines.

"You hear I'm a dictator. That's a lot of hooey. The government has the power, not the minister."

He said the Cowlishaw case had "all been stirred up by an American law professor at Simon Fraser University."

"I'd like to tell those cotton pickin' professors to run their universities and leave me alone. Some of those professors need to be told where to head in," Gagliardi said.

Find Jobs

Gagliardi says his Alliance of Businessmen is more successful at finding jobs than Canada Manpower.

"Manpower can't get near us. We don't have sophisticated psychologists or head shrinkers in our organization. We just have ordinary people

STORMS CLAIM 122 IN JAPAN

TOKYO (AP) — At least 122 persons were killed and 22 are reported missing in blizzards and storms that swept parts of Japan during the weekend holiday celebrating the arrival of spring.

Twenty-three mountain climbers died on Mount Fuji, Japan's highest peak, where heavy rain and winds up to 90 miles an hour set off an avalanche. Six other climbers are missing. It was the worst mountain climbing disaster on the 12,337-foot mountain since the Second World War.

The National Police Agency reported 85 deaths in traffic accidents Sunday and Monday morning.

Police said 12 fishermen were drowned and nine others were presumed dead following the sinking of their fishing boat off the Dano Islands west of Kyushu, the southernmost main Japanese island. Authorities said three other persons were listed as missing and presumed dead after their yacht was washed ashore 24 miles southwest of Tokyo.

In other areas, police said, two climbers were killed in the central Alps in Honshu, Japan's main island, and four were reported missing on 7,513-foot Mount Daisetsu, in central Hokkaido, the northernmost main island.

Nixon Declares All-Out War On Drug Abuse

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon Monday called drug abuse his country's "No 1 domestic problem" and said that despite the need to save money "this is one area where we cannot have budget cuts."

Penalties for marijuana use should be uniform throughout the country, he said.

The president is scheduled to receive a report on marijuana Wednesday from the national commission on marijuana and dangerous drugs.

Yesterday morning the president met Prime Minister Nihat Erkin of Turkey and thanked him for Turkey's campaign against poppy cultivation. Later today, he will sign a bill establishing the special action office for drug abuse prevention, which Nixon established last year under Dr. Jerome Jaffe.

He made his comments in New York City, where he met federal and state officials in the morning. He returned to Washington in the early afternoon to meet with his cabinet committee on international narcotic control.

On the meeting table were bags of seized heroin valued at $2 million. The small bags, weighing a total of about 20 pounds, came from France and were seized last year in Port Elizabeth, N.J.

In addition to his criticism of the heroin trafficker, the president said he had not changed his opposition to the legalization of marijuana, but he said some penalties may be too stiff.

POLICY CRITICIZED

At the meeting of the cabinet committee, Secretary of State William P. Rogers reported that Turkey has issued a decree putting an end to the planting of poppies after this year.

In taking a firm stand against marijuana, Nixon warned that a "permissive" attitude toward drug abuse can weaken "the fabric of American life."

Because the trafficker "destroys the lives of young people," there should be "no sympathy whatever" for him, and "no limit insofar as the criminal penalty is concerned," the president said.

Mudslide Hits Trio

MICHEL (CP) — Weeping relatives watched Monday night as rescue workers with bulldozers searched a massive slide for three brothers, believed buried under tons of mud.

Amelio Marra, 34, and his brothers Luigi, 40, and Serafino, 36, all of Blairmore, Alta., were swept away by a wave of mud and debris Monday as they ate their lunch beside CP Rail track near this southeastern British Columbia town 10 miles west of the B.C.-Alberta border.

Another man, Matsuishi Ogusuku, 59, also of Blairmore, survived, although he was buried to his waist. He was in satisfactory condition in hospital with broken ribs and bruises.

Search efforts, suspended late Monday night when more mudslides threatened to bury rescue workers, resumed today.

Arab guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat warned today that those who co-operate with King Hussein's proposal to establish a "Palestine" state will be assassinated.

In an interview published in the Beirut newspaper Al Anwar, Arafat was quoted as saying: "It is a disgrace to allow agents to determine our fate and the fate of our nation."

The committee said it was time for the administration and congress to recognize that narcotics — the key to soaring street crime — is a medical rather than a criminal problem.

This was a reference to the assassination in Cairo Nov. 28 of Tell, Jordan's prime minister, by a secret guerrilla group.

In Jerusalem, Premier Golda Meir said she "would be delighted to go to Amman" if King Hussein of Jordan invited her.

But she rejected the concept of an independent Palestinian state between the borders of Israel and Jordan.

"Our idea is that historic Palestine extends from the Mediterranean to the Iraqi border," she said. "There is room for two countries, one Arab and one Jewish. If there is a peace with Jordan and then they decide to call themselves Palestine, well, they can call themselves whatever they want."

ITT 'Promoted' Chile Coup Bid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Columnist Jack Anderson said today he had secret documents which showed International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. dealt with the Central Intelligence Agency in trying to block the 1970 election of Salvador Allende as president of Chile.

Anderson, in his syndicated Washington Merry-Go-Round column, said the documents showed that at one point ITT, in collaboration with the CIA, "considered triggering a military coup to head off Allende's election."

"These documents portray ITT as a virtual corporate nation in itself with vast international apparatus and even its own classification system," Anderson wrote.

Anderson said the originals of the documents presumably were destroyed in a document shredder when ITT destroyed "many sacks" of papers in its Washington office last month. But he said that "nevertheless" he had obtained copies.

The papers show, Anderson said, that ITT officials were

The Path...

In spring, a boy swan's fancy lightly turns you-know-where and as a few males can testify, that may mean trouble. It meant trouble for traffic and police too on the Old Island Highway at Jedburgh

... of Love...

this morning. For over an hour Const. G. J. Field kept this befuddled bird from wandering in front of cars. Then the SPCA came to take it away. That's Insp. Ed Wiens wielding a nifty net. Later, Insp.

... Can Smart!

Don Adams reported swan had minor wounds on beak and a wing and was running a temperature. He speculated bird was a victim of love and a typically inept flyer. When two males quarrel over favors of a hen, the loser must leave. Because swans fly poorly, they frequently hit wires or other objects. Bird is being kept under observation. (Bill Halkett photos.)

... responding

Slight improvement was reported today in the condition of Dale Coverdale, 19, who was found unconscious in a ditch on the Malahat almost four weeks ago and has been in a coma since then.

A hospital spokesman said Miss Coverdale, apparently the victim of a hit-and-run accident, is "opening and focusing her eyes occasionally," and is otherwise responding to persons around her.

"So long as there are no complications, we feel she will be all right," the spokesman said.

The woman was found by a motorist on the Shawnigan Lake cut-off the night of Feb. 23, two hours after she had left work at a teen-agers' clothing shop on Hillside.

RCMP discovered Miss Coverdale's car parked

two blocks from the store, but have come up with no explanation for her presence on the Shawnigan Lake Road. They have not been able to interview her.

She was last reported seen heading for the parking lot shortly after 9 p.m. store closing, carrying a purse, a loaf of bread and a book. All three items were found in the car, the door unlocked.

An RCMP officer said Miss Coverdale had acquaintances at Shawnigan Lake, but could find no indication that she had planned a trip there that night.

"It was obviously foul play," the officer said. "The hit and run was foul play."

"She was either taken to the road in another car, or taken in her own, which was later brought back to Victoria."

There was no evidence of sexual attack, and her multiple injuries were consistent with being struck by a car.

Welfare Hike 'Disgraceful Slap in Face'

Provincial opposition leaders and spokesmen for poor people, pensioners and foster parents have criticized the government's 6.5 per cent increase in the basic welfare rate as far too little and long overdue.

Comments were: "It's very insulting" ... "disappointing" ... "bloody small potatoes" ... "slap in the face" ... "disgraceful" ... "I am stunned."

Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gagliardi, who announced Monday that the increase in the elderly supplement and welfare rate will take effect April 1, today brushed aside the criticism by saying the welfare recipient can't have the same income as the working man.

"You have to keep a balance between what you are allowed to give them (welfare recipients) and what the working man is getting ... or else you would have everybody quitting their jobs to go on welfare."

He termed the increase an effort "to keep up with some of the rising costs" in living and said that the $9 or $10 million it will cost is "not a small sum of money."

He also clarified that the increase only applies to the basic rate and not to rent overages or other supplementary aid.

What it means is that a single person will now see his $80 a month — which is for rent, food, clothing, recreation and sundries — go up $5.20. Married couples will have their $135 go up almost $9, a couple with one child will have their $173 boosted about $11.20, and a family of four will get roughly $13.70 more than the current $211.
